POLLUTION TAX URGED

Social Credit MLA Burt Campbell Friday suggested that the five per cent sales tax be increased to six per cent to raise money for pollution control.

Campbell made the proposal while seconding the adoption of the throne speech in the legislature.

The MLA said the fight against pollution was the responsibility of every citizen and said that the tax would involve all citizens in pollution control. People should be prepared "to put their money where their mouth is", he said.

Campbell stated that the one per cent surcharge, based on the amount of the social service tax raised in the last fiscal year, would raise $35 million per year. He suggested further that the surcharge be tried for a period of perhaps two or three years.

The MLA said he felt that the tax would not be hardship on those at the lower end of the income scale because they spend their money on non-taxable items, but that industry would pay the bulk of the funds collected.

Egyptian Planes Hit Canal Targets

Times News Services

Egyptian bombers pounded Israeli positions in the southern sector of the Suez canal today, following up on a deep aerial penetration Friday into the Israeli-occupied Sinai desert.

Israeli jets raided an area south of the Dead Sea today and in ground action killed 10 Arab commandos in a clash on Jordan's border.

A Cairo spokesman said today's bombing attack near the Suez set two Israeli positions ablaze, did heavy damage and returned safely to base.

Friday's strike by the Egyptians was their deepest into the Sinai Desert since the 1967 Middle East war. It was acknowledged by the Israelis who claimed military installations and encampments had escaped damage.

The Egyptian attacks followed Israeli raids including the capture of an island at the entrance to the Suez Gulf and another air attack on army installations on the outskirts of Cairo.

Israeli troops captured Shadwan Island Thursday. The Isrealis said they had killed 70 Egyptians and took another 62 prisoners.

The Israelis withdrew from the island Friday after holding it for 32 hours. They took out Egyptian hardware and a British-built radar station, the second radar system to fall into their hands in less than a month.

Cairo said the Israelis failed to remain on the island "due to stiff resistance on the land and massive air strikes." But Isreali officers said they "didn't come to stay." They said they had fulfiled their mission and were under no pressure to leave.

INQUEST MONDAY

An inquest into the death of John Douglas Hampton will start Monday even if test results from the Vancouver police laboratory have not arrived, Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Friday.

The results were expected Friday, the coroner said, but he had been informed the tests on blood and body substance samples taken from the 18-year-old Saanich high school student are still being completed.

TRUCK EXPLODES, 17 ISRAELIS DIE

ELATH (AP) — An Israeli army truck laden with explosives blew up at the dock of this Red Sea port today after disembarking from an Israeli transport ship. Early reports said 17 persons were killed and 34 injured.

An Israeli military spokesman said there was no immediate evidence that the blast was caused by Arab saboteurs.

The blast in Elath's naval port shook and rattled windows throughout the city of 13,000 people.

One resident who rushed to the military port after hearing the explosions said:

"We saw a huge black mushroom of smoke. There were dozens of bodies strewn over a hundred yards. It was the most horrifying thing I have ever seen."

One unconfirmed account said the truck was being unloaded from a transport ship which had brought back military equipment captured on Egypt's Red Sea island of Shadwan, held by the Israelis for 32 hours this week.

Head-on Smash Kills Two

BURNABY (CP) — A head-on, two-car collision Friday night claimed the lives of a man and a baby boy in this Vancouver suburb.

Dead are Ernest George Brewer, 26, of Coquitlam and six-month-old Garry Neilson of Port Moody.

Nigeria Pulls Unruly Troops

BOMB SUSPECTED IN UBC BLAST

VANCOUVER (CP) — An explosion Friday night in an empty seminar room at the University of British Columbia blew out windows and damaged furniture under which a bomb was apparently placed.

Police said there were no injuries and no fire as a result of the blast.

Two weeks ago an explosion caused about $500 damage to the main entrance to the UBC mathematics building.

Atrocities Spark Action

Times News Services

LAGOS — Nigerian troops accused of running amok, looting and raping in the former rebel Biafra enclave have been withdrawn from the area.

Federal headquarters has replaced them with the 1st Marine Division, considered Nigeria's most highly disciplined unit and the core of the army before the civil war broke out in 1967.

Military police were reported taking stern measures against troops caught molesting civilians or looting.

Reports said about 30 soldiers were rounded up in Owerri this week and led away with their hands bound, under armed guard, to military cells. In another case an officer drew his pistol and aimed at a looting soldier but the man fled into the bush.

FINAL HOURS

The troops withdrawn, the 3rd Marine Division, bore the brunt of the battle in the final hours of the civil war. Observers attribute their lack of discipline and misconduct to the fact most of them were recruited and hurriedly trained under pressure of the Biafra uprising.

Meanwhile, Nigerian authori-

Senate Moves to Cut Marijuana Penalties

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Senate moved today toward passage of a bill sharply reducing penalties for using or selling drugs ranging from marijuana to heroin.

A vote was expected Monday and leaders of both parties predicted passage. The bill then would face house consideration.

The measure, backed by the Nixon administration, also is designed to crack down on crime syndicate drug trafficking through stiff sentences for pushers found in court to be "professional criminals."

They would face at least five years in prison for the first offense and 10 years for the second, with no probation, suspension or parole allowed.

Penalties also would be stiffened for adults convicted of selling drugs to children.

The bill would eliminate mandatory jail sentences for most other drug offenses, including sale of heroin and other hard narcotics. It would make possession of marijuana, heroin or other drugs — the charge imposed on users — a misdemeanor rather than a felony.

The judge could even cancel a first conviction so, for example, a youth picked up at a "pot party" would carry no criminal record.

Victoria Rink Advances Again

Victoria's Tony Gutoski defeated Harry Spottswood of Port Alberni 8-5 and Don McRae of Nanaimo edged Vancouver's Mert Ballard 8-6 to advance to tonight's 'A" final in the Pacific Coast senior men's curling championships at Victoria Curling Club.

Paris Teen-Ager Fifth Immolation

PARIS (UPI) — A 17-year-old girl set fire to herself today and leaped to her death from a fourth floor window of a private school in a fashionable section of west Paris. It was the fifth immolation suicide in France this week.

No motive was immediately reported for the fiery death today of the high school age girl indentified as Caroline Shutz. One of the other suicides involved a youth who said he was protesting the Nigerian civil war.

A witness said he saw the girl after she jumped from the window of the school near the River Seine on the right bank.

"I heard a scream from the school and when I went outside I saw a flaming body on the sidewalk," he said.

Strike Closes Vancouver Schools: B.C. Mediation Body Intervenes

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial mediation commission Friday stepped into the labor dispute that has closed Vancouver schools by calling a meeting of those involved in the wage dispute.

About 75,000 students were sent home Friday morning when 206 members of the International Union of Operating Engineers walked off the job. Classroooms are expected to remain closed Monday.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson was asked Friday ifi he considers the schools an essential service of the kind in which binding arbitration may be used to force an end to the dispute.

"I regard the schools as an essential service.' If it (the strike) stops the operation of the schools or interferes unduly with the health requirements of the schools, the answer is yes," he said.

Asked if the school strike situation qualifies for the use of the arbitration procedures contained in the Mediation Commission Act, he said:

"There is provision for a recommendation along these lines by the minister of labor at the appropriate time.

"You don't have to read too far between the lines to understand the significance of that."

Mr. Peterson said he had not received any reports on the situation from either the striking union or the Vancouver school board.

Shortly after making the statement that the school board and the union received notices from the mediation commission that it will hold a preliminary inquiry Monday "to ascertain matters in dispute."

EX-VICTORIAN SUSPENDED BY BOARD

Beard Sparks Quebec School Uproar

By PAUL WILLIAMSON
(Special to the Times)

QUEBEC — A Quebec school board has suspended a former Victorian from his position as a teacher because he refuses to remove his beard.

The suspension of 23-year-old Bruce Wallace is the latest in a series of crises to rock the school board of the Quebec City suburb of Charlesbourg.

And the row has moved Quebec Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal to label the school board's action "farfelu" — which roughly translates as "hare-brained."

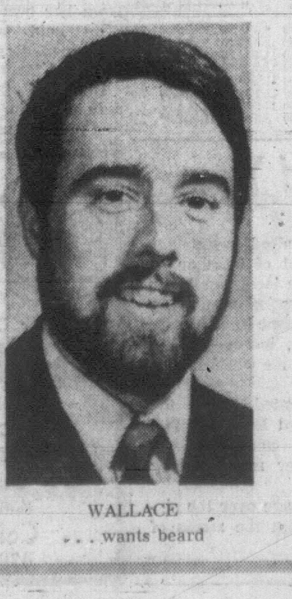
The suspension of Wallace, son of the principal of Oak Bay Senior Secondary School, has caused widespread public comment and has been given considerable attention by the French language press and television.

His father John Wallace, working at Oak Bay High this morning, said his son telephoned to inform him of the suspension, but that he had no further information on the incident.

Wallace, who attended Willows School and Oak Bay High, was a first-class student and student leader at the University of Victoria. He graduated in 1968 and taught English and chemistry in an interior B.C. high school last year.

On Jan. 14, he was suspended from his Quebec position as a Grade 11 English teacher. School board officials report he was fired for "insubordination" because he refuses to comply with a regulation that teachers must be shaven.

While teaching in B.C., Wallace wore a beard. He went to Quebec with his wife and infant son last August. In early September, at the time of his interview with the director of personnel for the Charlesbourg school board, he still had his beard.



WALLACE
. . . wants beard

It was only after he had signed his contract and school had opened that he was told he would have to shave.

The personnel director, Sylvio Langlois, told Wallace the rule was "ridiculous" but that it had to be obeyed. He suggested, however, that it could be changed.

For what, according to Wallace, were mainly financial reasons, he decided to abide by the regulation and he shaved, but told Langlois that he was considering growing his beard again over the Christmas holidays.

During the fall term, Wallace permitted his sideburns to grow almost to his chin, but no one took any notice.

"It was only when I let the last couple of inches grow, joining the sideburns to make a beard, that school board officials reacted," Wallace said.

He grew the beard while visiting British Columbia for the Christmas holidays.

On his return, school did not open unutil Jan. 14 because of "administrative difficulties." One day before the classes resumed, Wallace was told that he would have to shave.

He refused.

In an interview, Wallace said "my personal reason for growing it back was that I feel better in a beard and I look better with a beard, and therefore I am more relaxed in the classroom."

When he realized the school board was in fact going to demand that he shave, Wallace decided on a one-day strike.

Delta-Kaiser Deal Slammed

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Friday termed "an absolute scandal" a deal between Delta municipality and Kaiser Resources Ltd. to supply Delta water to Roberts Bank superport.

He said the provincial government would use its powers to set aside the deal, a "subterfuge" in which the National Harbors Board played a role in "undercutting" B.C. laws.

Campbell said the water deal "purports to be the basis of Delta's right to collect taxes on the port facility" but added that the municipality could collect taxes only under the authority of the provincial Municipal Act "which prohibits under-the-table deals with any industrial enterprise."

Campbell, in a letter to the municipality, said it was unbelievable that Ottawa is claiming that land created off Roberts Bank for the port facility lies outside Delta and outside the province of B.C.

Earlier this month Campbell issued a statement backing up a provincial cabinet order which had extended Delta boundaries to include all the port lands.

Ottawa claims that a Supreme Court of Canada ruling on offshore rights means water lots are federal territory.

Campbell made his remarks outsdie the legislature.

Robert Wenman (SC—Delta) said in the house that he was "shocked" to hear that Ottawa was trying to create "another province" in the middle of B.C. by maintaining the superport land was outside of the province.

'People Going Hungry' Over Erroneous Idea

Meals on Wheels is not a charity.

"It is a social service based on a real physical need," says Mrs. Catherine Horne, executive of Victoria Silver Threads Centre.

"It is operated on a sound medical basis as a benefit to men and women who cannot cater for themselves."

Mrs. Horne made the statement in reference to recent reports that men and women have not asked for the service because they think it is a charity.

"This an entirely erroneous idea," she said, "and, because of it, some very deserving people are going hungry."

60-CENT MEAL

The Meals on Wheels service is operated by Silver Threads, the Victorian Order of Nurses, Goodwill Enterprises, the Metropolitan Board of Health and 150 volunteer drivers and hostesses.

The drivers and hostesses deliver 150 meals daily to men and women in the Greater Victoria area. The meal, priced at 60 cents, comprises a meat entree with vegetables, dessert, bun and butter.

"One good meal a day keeps many elderly people out of hospitals and nursing homes" Mrs. Horne said. "It is therefore a social benefit.

FLU VICTIMS

"The men and women who receive these meals are not necessarily poor. They may be recovering from accidents or illnesses and therefore unable to shop for themselves.

"They may be unable to prepare meals and unable to find anyone to do this for them. The messages of appreciation we get suggest there is a very real need for Meals on Wheels."

Mrs. Horne said many men and women now receiving the daily meal are victims of the recent flu epidemic.

"Anyone who has had the flu will know that the recovery period is no time to go without proper nourishment."

GENUINE CASE

Applications for the service are referred to the Victorian Order of Nurses operating under authority of the Metropolitan Board of Health.

A VON nurse then interviews the person concerned and, if it is a genuine case of need, the service is provided.

Journalists 'Outvoted Minority'

OTTAWA (CP) — Journalists are an "out-voted minority" in the American Newspaper Guild, says Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate.

In a written submission Friday to the special Senate committee on the mass media, Mr. Keate said there can be no doubt the ANG has achieved important reforms in the way of improved salaries, reduced working hours and longer vacations.

But in expanding its membership from professional journalists to take in business office personnel, telephone clerks and janitors, the guild had departed "very far" from founder Heywood Broun's original concept.

"One result has been that the journalists find themselves an out-voted minority, frequently tied in wage negotiations to the aspirations of the non-professional majority.

"This is patently ludicrous. The logical but unlikely resolution of this situation is for the journalists to break away from the guild and form their own association.

"A few tentative overtures in this direction have been successfully howled down by guild executives in Washington, D.C., and at home."

Mr. Keate's brief was filed with the committee but its author was not questioned orally by committee members.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

When doctors and researchers a hundred years ago wanted to learn something about the effect of weather on people, they could feel pretty secure that the local population was stable. It is different now, with the migration of so many people from region to region and even continent to continent. Biometeorologists have been able to learn, however, what happens to big people and little people when the weather gets cold.

Heavy people who are broad framed, like the Scandinavians and the larger Americans and Russians, feel warmer than do smaller people during a cold snap. But smaller people who are lightweight recover more quickly from exposure to cold.

Smaller people also have another advantage over the six-footers: they show less harmful effects from the stress of exposure to cold than big men.

Artist's Concept of Proposed High-Rise

Council Approves High-Rise Plans

The tower will be 330 feet high, about five time the height of The Bay building.

Although by far the tallest building on the Victoria skyline the $8.5 million project would not, council members were assured, spoil the skyline.

It was an assurance that did little to allay the fears of Ald. Hugh Ramsay who said the height was "out of all proportion to what the city of Victoria should have."

Ald. Peter Pollen said the plans for the building had received a great deal of study before being approved and added the building was "esthetically outstanding." He also noted that the area of the city in which the project was panned badly needed some "vitality."

Copp told the Times later construction will start this summer and take about 18 months. Contemplated name for the building is the Sir James Douglas Tower.

The plans call for a two-storey shopping mall with parking above it. The tower will have 209 motel units, topped by 195 apartments, 35 of them classified as luxury units. One floor of the tower will be devoted to recreation facilities, convention and banquet rooms.

The rooftop restaurant and cocktail bar will be reached by an express elevator housed in an outside glass-walled shaft.

The 34-year-old Copp is a native of Vancouver who has operated in Victoria for the past seven years and owns and operates apartment buildings here.

He said Friday he believes the new project will be the tallest building in western Canada and the fourth tallest in the country.

LONGER RUNWAYS SOUGHT

The transport department will be asked by Victoria Chamber of Commerce to revise its plan for extension of Patricia Bay airport runways.

The project planned for last year and deferred to 1970 was to increase runway length to 7,000 feet and install improved landing aids.

Chamber directors Friday approved a motion by transportation chairman Newell Morrison to ask that the extension provide for 8,000 feet, so as to accommodate fully loaded jet aircraft.

They also asked that regular jet traffic be instituted here by 1973 or 1974.

Dealing with the road approach to the airport, Morrison said he was unable to obtain information on whether the "atrocious" connection with Patricia Bay Highway will be corrected. It is "a horrible stretch of road," he said.

Sexual Assault Confirmed

Pathologist Dr. F. L. Sturrock said Evangeline, whose eighth birthday would have been on Jan. 15, died from asphyxiation either from the pond water she was found lying face-down in or from her own gastric contents.

He said later he expects further medical tests to indicate which of the two caused death.

He said there was "very definite evidence" Evangeline had been sexually assaulted.

. . . BEARD

"I wanted to draw to the attention of the teachers that the school board had the legal power to dictate this kind of personal regulation to a professional group."

But when the union stepped in, he changed tactics.

"When I was assured of the support of the union, I was willing to take the chance of having my contract revoked and having the union push it as a test case."

Currently, school board officials have recommended that Wallace's contract be revoked. The board must act on the recommendation within the next 10 days.

The Association of Quebec Teachers, the accredited union for Charlesbourg district, has given notice that it will appeal if the contract is revoked.

Union president Etienne Tremblay said the ruling against beards is "ridiculous, anti-democratic and contrary to the rights of man."

RIGHTS ISSUE

"Many priests wear beards, popes have worn them, and I myself wear a moustache," said the Minister.

"The school board should think about more important things," he concluded.

The Charlesbourg school board has already been the object of criticism this year. In September, schools opened two weeks late because at the last minute the time table for the entire district had to be revamped.

In October, all 6,000 students in the district were expelled for three days in a row over dress regulations. In January, schools opened three to 10 days late because of a mix-up in school bus timetables.

And the Wallace affair has brought the school district into the headlines once again.

FRONT PAGE

In a front page story, L'Action, one of Quebec City's dailies, proclaimed "this case, caused by the untimely zeal of certain people in authority, constitutes an escalation in the struggle to banish long hair and mini-skirts, etc."

The largest daily, Le Soleil, in a story on Jean-Guy Cardinal's comments, ends the story with "as for Mr. Wallace, he must have laughed in his beard on hearing Mr. Cardinal's comments."

School board official Langlois admits that "if the Minister of Education says that our rule against beards is completely hare-brained, that is certain to weigh heavy in the balance."

But appeals take time, and Wallace is looking for another job.

PETITIONS

The suspension of Wallace because he wears a beard has sparked widespread reaction in Quebec City.

An official of St. Patrick's High School in suburban St. Foy told Wallace that a committee has been set up to revamp the school's regulations which to this point have outlawed beards.

Wallace was told the action was taken as a direct result of newspaper coverage of his suspension.

Teachers at two other Quebec schools have signed petitions asking the school board to reinstate the suspended teacher.

The petitions claim "the amount that a teacher shaves each day in no way affects his professional qualifications or competence."

The newspaper L'Action reported that two other Quebec area school districts have rulings against beards, but that they "would not be enforced."

Quebec's other French daily, Le Soleil, quotes Elphege Morasse, the principal of the school where Wallace teaches, as saying both he and personnel director Sylvio Langlois "admit that the rule is ridiculous."

Vietnam Documentary Film 'Classic in Journalism'

By STEVE HUME

The crunch and clatter of troops marching mingles with the roar of the crowd, and the standard-bearers hold their staffs proudly.

It is a scene that calls to mind other eagles and another army, marching into Europe and the Mediterranean under Roman generals 2,000 years ago.

SHINES LIKE JEWEL

Emile de Antonio's documentary about the Vietnamese people's fight for freedom and self-determination is a multi-faceted jewel in a year of good movies.

With brilliant editing and exhaustive research, de Antonio has created a classic in film journalism.

He covers Vietnam from the French rule, through the corrupt Diem regime to the peak of U.S. involvement.

But he does not succumb to the temptation to moralize or condemn. He leaves that to his subjects in judiciously-collected film clips of speeches, press conferences and interviews from the last 10 years.

There are politicians, generals, statesmen, former civil servants and even a ranking member of the Central Intelligence Agency.

SELF CONDEMNATION

And they condemn themselves, in their own words, more convincingly than any movie director ever could with the artifice of his art form.

In the Year of the Pig solemnly records the lies, admitted mistakes and miscalculations, the bureaucratic bungling, the rationalizations and desperate justifications of a U.S. government tangled up in the trappings of an obsolete imperialism.

Oregon senator Wayne Morse catches the government telling blatant lies about Vietnam situations. An admiral of the joint chiefs of staff at the Pentagon is caught both lying and displaying shocking ignorance of the naval situation of North Vietnam by an adept CBS reporter.

POLITICIANS INDICTED

It all adds up, by the ethics and morals that have traditionally been American, to a massive indictment of the politicians who allow the Vietnam conflict to continue.

It is here that de Antonio's film transcends the genre of documentary, unconsciously taking on the characteristics of a Greek tragedy by Aeschylus.

There is the same cool, detached observation of the ordered and bureaucratic spread of evil, and the tragic consequences for a great nation that cannot come to terms with the reality of that evil.

FULL CIRCLE

And this is the tragedy of the United States: A nation that was born in a bloody fight for freedom with an imperial power has come full circle, has become the opposite of its hard-won birthright.

He sees a nation being dehumanized by the sophistication of its technology and the proliferation of its military hardware.

U.S. generals make racist statements about "Orientals," a colonel in the field talks in the same breath of the religious reverence of his men and the fact that they are "a bloody good bunch of killers."

Yet the film is not all one-sided. There is a sequence which gives an evocative historical perspective on Ho Chi Minh, intercut with clips of an interview with Yale professor Paul Mus who tells of Ho's wisdom and insight into Confucious.

There is an interview with a French journalist who visited North Vietnam during U.S. air raids, who describes the depth to which the people's determination has grown.

He describes the peasants, armed in the fields with rifles, and shooting back at supersonic U.S. warplanes.

This, says the journalist, is a sign of the humanization of the Vietnamese people's struggle.

The government proved to the people it did not wish to oppress them by giving them all guns. They, in turn, could overthrow the government in a day. This is the trust of the government and the people.

ties are believed today to have received first-hand information, verifying recent reports by foreign newsmen about disorganization, starvation and mistreatment of Ibo women since the war's end.

Reliable sources say Chief Anthony Enahoro, commissioner of labor and information, has received the report from a government aide who accompanied a group of 80 journalists into the area this week.

IBOS FLEE

His report apparently emphasized four main problems, commandeering of Ibo girls and women, lack of organization in relief efforts, absence of vehicles to transport refugees and Ibos fleeing into the bush.

Observers say the main difficulty at present is a lack of communications between the war-ravaged areas and Nigerian administrative centres.

The vanquished Ibo tribesmen have admitted there has been no genocide on the part of federal troops as they had been warned to expect by Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu, the former Biafran leader now in exile in the Ivory Coast.

In London, a British mission appointed by Prime Minister Harold Wilson deplored today what it called the indiscipline and misconduct of Nigerian troops "flushed with victory" in the former war zone.

Blast Victims 'Improving'

An RCMP spokesman said the investigation into the blast which killed Ron Marchment, 31, of Lake Cowichan is continuing and there will be an inquest.

The drying kiln of Island Shake and Shingle Co. Ltd. was shattered shortly after 8 a.m. Debris from the concrete block building was tossed over a wide area and residents reported windows broken and houses shaken up to half a mile away.

Both have undergone surgery, Matskwi for head and leg injuries and Svendsen for rib, back and arm injuries.

Albert Rooke, also of Lake Cowichan, is in good condition at Cowichan Hospital. He suffered head injuries. Edwin Wolter of Lake Cowichan was treated for head injuries and released.

Police said today there was obviously an accumulation of gas in the propane-fired kiln but they have yet to determine how it got there or what touched it off.

Coroner C. L. Anderson has not set a date for the opening of the inquest.

Marchment was a brother-in law of one of the company's owners, Bert Todenbush' Rooke is a brother of Norman Rooke, the other owner.

Norman Rooke said today he has no idea the extent of damage and there are no plans yet on what the company will do about the kiln operation. There is insurance covering the damage.

Normally there would have been 30 men at work but the mill was shut down a week ago because of poor market conditions. Only the loading crew and four men working on a construction project were present at the time of the blast.

U.S. ARMY SEES RACE TENSIONS

SAIGON (AP) — A military study says all indications point towards an increase in racial tension in the U.S. Army and that Negro soldiers have lost faith in the army system.

But, the study says: "Information currently held by army counter-intelligence, does not substantiate that members of the Black Panther party are engaged in any organized activities in the army."

FERRY DEAL 'NOT SEALED'

The provincial government is looking at a Swedish ferry but hasn't bought it yet.

"We haven't (bought), I'll say that," Premier Bennett said. "We may."

He was commenting in an interview on reports that B.C. Ferries had purchased a ferry in Sweden. It was said to be as large as the Queen of Prince Rupert, about 3,000 tons.

Monte Aldous, B.C. Ferries' general manager, Thursday denied the report of the purchase and a highways department official said he had heard nothing about it.

Highways Minister Wesley Black said "a certain ferry" in Sweden was being looked at. "It's under adjudication," he added.

The Queen of Prince Rupert operates on the Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert run. It was built in 1966 at Victoria Machinery Depot and cost between $6 million and $7 million.

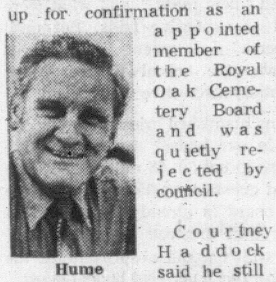
Private 'Social' Session Smooths Council Debate

By JIM HUME



Hume

Victoria city council's first open rebuke to its new mayor slid past with hardly a ripple Friday afternoon.

Laverne Sands name came up for confirmation as an appointed member of the Royal Oak Cemetery Board and was quietly rejected by council.

Courtney Haddock said he still couldn't understand why council should be so much against a funeral parlor operator sitting on the cemetery board, but then accepted the flat rejection of his choice.

There was a good reason for the lack of fire in the debate.

Most of the snapping and the acrimony had been worked out of aldermanic systems earlier in the week during a private dinner session at the Imperial Inn, Haddock's favorite watering hole.

The meeting (the entire jolly group was there except Ald. Cecil Parrott, confined to barracks with a bad cold) convened over a glass of schnapps, a slice of meat and, naturally, a coffee for the road.

The cemetery board appointment wasn't the only topic on the agenda. In fact the little "let's get together and let our hair down" session touched on some fascinating topics, including a couple of key personnel problems.

And, if it makes Sands feel any better, council members also took a run at a couple of other Haddock committee appointments. But all they could do with them was complain because at the first meeting of the year they had approved the seating on committee of the men they now wanted to challenge.

The idea of city council members getting together once in a while for a pint and a sandwich isn't at all bad as long as they stay away from policy debate and policy decisions during such sessions.

However, last Tuesday the burghers of Victoria came fairly close to holding a council meeting with no record kept and no public to view the proceedings.

Adding a wry twist to the two council sessions this week were the audacious comments Friday afternoon by Ald. Tom Christie and Ald. Clyde Savage. Both, this time, were speaking in open council in the city hall council chamber. Both were conscious that the press was waiting with pencils poised, and both were on their pet hobby horse, the swimming pool.

Inside City Hall

And Christie: 'We were hoodwinked."

Not bad comments from two stalwarts of democracy who like everything out in the open, but spent a good part of Tuesday evening doing what they condemned in public Friday.

While Victoria council Friday approved the sale of city-owned land near Spencer Castle to make way for a $2 million apartment project, the deal isn't fully cinched.

Before the bulldozers move in the complex, which looks tremendous on paper, has to survive a public hearing.

With one 64-signature petition already in that session could prove one of the livliest of the year.

Before it takes place a few city council members might hone up on procedure. Last Friday, the first full agenda council meeting of the year, even with debate mild, the danger of a shambles was too close for comfort.

Memo from Saanich Deputy Police Chief Chief R. A. Peterson suggesting we print "the other side of the story" regarding a Saanich patrol car nipping the wrong way on Fort Street with red light flashing.

The two bobbies in the car say they weren't travelling south on Douglas as reported a couple of weeks ago, but were heading north.

At the Douglas — Fort intersection they spoted a car whose occupants were wanted by Victoria's finest for a criminal offence. But let patrol car driver Constable B. D. Hobbis tell the story.'

"The traffic at the intersection at this time was such that it was impossible for me to negotiate a right turn, U-turn, or proceed straight ahead. In order to take up pursuit of the vehicle, which was proceeding south, I turned on the flashing red light and made a left turn onto Fort. At this time I did not encounter any oncoming vehicles."

Anyway, left on Fort, left on Broad, left on Broughton and right on Douglas to pursue the wanted vehicle which was "stopped and its occupants held until the arrival of the city police."

That's the Saanich version backed by Const. K. N. Gale, a duty officer in the car, and delighted we are to print it.

Emergency Prescription

PRESIDENT NIXON'S STATE-of-the-Union message last Thursday was devoted mainly to declarations of action against three forms of pollution: environmental (air, water and land), moral (crime) and economic (inflation). The programs which he indicated would be followed in combatting these three major dangers to the nation are far-reaching and in some cases unprecedented.

If implemented in large measure they would constitute great steps forward by the United States in its effort to struggle back from the brink of irreversible water and air pollution, cancerous infiltration of organized crime into every aspect of the nation's life, and erosion of the dollar to an extent which is cheating the people of the benefits of their economic growth.

It is natural that much of the criticism of Mr. Nixon's address is political. He cannot avoid accusations of partisanship, manoeuvring, artfulness and other unworthy motives from those who see him only as a political enemy to be denigrated, a scheming office holder to be removed. But taken at face value, the President's proposals were logical, even unavoidable, in view of the urgent circumstances. The breadth of some of the remedies is a measure of the critical ailments which must be cured.

* * *

In conjunction with the attack on crime, surely no United States president has ever before been able to charge members of Congress with being afraid to "leave their cars in the Capitol garage and walk home alone tonight." The Senate moved quickly to endorse sweeping provisions to combat the invasion of legitimate business by organized crime, imposition of "habitual criminal" penalties of up to 30 years imprisonment, action every 18 months by grand juries to investigate local crime and its political connections, tougher moves against erring public officials, guarantees of immunity and protection for witnesses, and other direct attacks on the underworld.

A major part of Mr. Nixon's program is a $10 billion plan "to put modern municipal waste treatment plants in every place in America where they are needed to make our waters clean again, and do it now." The five-year plan has been criticized as being far short of the $25 billions needed. But installation of treatment plants on even this lesser scale would go a long way to curb some of the most flagrant industrial abuses of waterways. A few large-scale examples of what can be done would spur improvement across the country.

Tied in with Mr. Nixon's call for anti-pollution action are positive suggestions for "purchasing open space and parklands, now, before they are lost to us." He added: "As our cities and suburbs relentlessly expand, those priceless open spaces needed for recreation areas accessible to their people are swallowed up — often forever. Unless we preserve these spaces while they are still available, we will have none to preserve."

* * *

On inflation, Mr. Nixon said "unless we stop the rise in prices, the cost of living for millions of American families will become unbearable and government's ability to plan programs for progress for the future will become impossible." He put heavy reliance on federal budget restraint, promising his second balanced budget.

There are many disadvantages in living next door to so large and active a nation as the United States, for a great deal of its influence on every aspect of our national life is unavoidable. But there is one marked advantage, in that we may observe in the rapid development of the United States many of the pitfalls which we should try to avoid.

Pollution, over-exploitation of resources, unplanned urban expansion—these and other modern ills are to be seen in profusion to the south. They are shamefully evident in our own country as well, but in many respects the United States is further along the road and we may read clear warning in its experience. Have we the common sense to profit by what we see; to learn from the mistakes and the recuperative efforts of our great neighbor?

A $148,000 Understatement

IT IS LAUDABLE FOR THE CAnadian Broadcasting Corporation to be contrite about spending $148,000 in 1967 for accommodation at Expo 67 that was never used, but that does not dispel the fact that hard-pressed taxpayers are out of pocket. CBC President George Davidson told the Commons public accounts committee that the needless waste of public funds was "a substantial error in judgment," and the CBC went "badly astray."

It is impossible to fault Mr. Davidson for what can only be termed a $148,000 understatement because he was not employed by the CBC at the time. The corporation has never been noted for its economics and it was for this reason, among others, that Mr. Davidson was appointed president. His candid disclosures to the public accounts committee are a step in the right direction. But action will speak more loudly than words in 1970.

Economy and strict budget control should get equal billing with creativity in a radio-television business that will handle $166 millions of public money this fiscal year. Knowing that the CBC will spend $8.30 per capita in the months ahead, few Canadians will doubt that the corporation has the expertise and logistical background to gauge something as simple as staff accommodation for an event like Expo. The CBC will have to use these skills if it hopes to have a consistent and credible image on the nation's television screens in the future.

Still Voicing Dissent

WHEN RUSSIA AND THE Warsaw Pact members smothered liberalization in Czechoslovakia, the Western World recognized a two-fold purpose in Moscow's action. By crushing the trend in Czechoslovakia the Kremlin discouraged other Eastern European countries inclined to deviate from the Soviet design. It also served notice on dissident factions within Russia itself that their criticisms would not be tolerated. But the latter have not been silenced.

"The Soviet Union's secret press is going strong," Paul Wohl reports to The Christian Science Monitor, and he supports his statements with excerpts from articles being circulated clandestinely within the country. These publicize protests against harsh repression of independent thinkers and writers, and explain the philosophies of liberal leaders who speak out against the official doctrine.

There is no indication that the secret press of the Soviet Union is going to change the attitude of the Kremlin toward liberalization, but at least the voice of dissent has not been silenced. While it lasts there is hope for a more democratic regime.

Peace

How much thought have you given to the word peace. What does it mean to you? No war or violence? This is not all. A world of love is a mass of people living and working together for the good of all, thinking as one, peace being the only alternative. How do we achieve this?

Did you ever stop to think that you yourself could do something? No matter how small; it is a step towards peace. If only you unite as one force working for the good of all, imagine what the world would be like. Why should we have to be in constant conflict with ourselves when the future of the whole world is at stake?

Who says we have to fight? Man has now learned that war cannot bring peace but only still greater conflict and hardships. When the hippy movement first came out, what could be more beautiful than love. What the hippy movement strongly lacks unfortunately is organization and working together in today's world. It goes back to the same old story, nobody wants to get involved.

A newspaper could put more effort and emphasis on what is good and worthwhile in the news. People could donate money for scholarships for students in underprivileged countries.

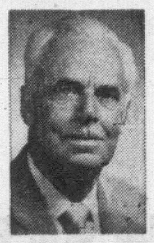
In Alberta, a Six Per Cent Ceiling on Schools

By JAMES GRAY

IF there is one concern which Prairie people share with all other Canadians it is frustration over the steadily rising costs of education. In particular they share a mounting anger over the impact of educational costs on the taxes on their homes. The Alberta government recently came up with a gimmick to blunt the upward spiral.



Gray

From now on, it told the school boards, the annual increase in the educational budgets must be ceilinged at 6 per cent and that means from right now. Last week the school boards discovered to their horror that the Alberta government is deathly serious about putting its plan into effect.

The Edmonton and Calgary school boards have been wrestling with budgets that run about 12 per cent above last year, or an increase of between $6,500,000 to $7,500,000 in each case. Under the government's policy, these increases must be cut in half. The alternative is to submit the difference to the taxpayers in the form of a referendum. Only if the taxpayers approve can the budget go beyond the 6 per cent limit.

Behind the steadily rising educational costs have been all the usual causes. The urbanization of the west, at a time when building costs have been breaking through historic highs, have made the business of supplying needed classrooms outrageously expensive. At the same time upgrading of teaching standards and steadily increasing teachers' salaries have added to the cost. Administrators have been given almost carte blanche to expand administrative, as distinct from teaching, services, staffs and salaries.

Over the years school budgets have kept going up at from 10 to 15 per cent a year. As the school boards simply tendered their requests for money to the city councils and the latter had to impose the necessary taxes to raise it, the civic politicians became very vocal critics of school board spending. They blamed all the regular tax increases on the school boards. The educational system became the whipping boy for both the home owning tax-payers and the civic politicians. But the school boards continued blithely on their merry way of budgeting.

A good deal of the criticism has had a ring of validity which has disturbed the provincial governments. Where the cities once settled for schools that all looked alike, they suddenly opted for non-conforming architecture which required that no two schools should look alike.

It has been an expensive change. The new schools each must be expensively designed architecturally. They are costlier to build, to maintain and to staff. Where one janitor once ran the furnace and cleaned a 12-room school, it now takes a "custodian" and a small army of assistants to look after a 20-room school.

The teachers who once hit the classrooms after a quick swish through Normal School have been replaced by college graduates with two or three degrees. The salaries have gone from $100 a month to $10,000 a year. In addition to the classroom teachers, the system has become loaded down with bevies of personal counsellors, guidance specialists, remedial reading assistants, staff psychologists and head office administrators almost without number!

The schools systems became such an amorphous and complicated thing that the school trustees tended to become rubber stamps of the administrators. And the public tended to become disenchanted with the system that introduced "new math," and what were regarded as expensive frills. But until the Alberta government imposed its crack-down, the school trustees were almost totally insensitive to criticism.

Now the anguished cries are going up. "Where in our budget can we possibly find places to cut out $3 million?" It is a very good question, particularly after the Calgary board is already committed to an 8 per cent increase in its teachers' salaries, which would absorb almost the entire allowable 6 per cent budget boost.

The trustees of course can stand by their budget and take it to a taxpayers' referendum. But the temper of the times is such that they are expressing no confidence that the electors would vote for the increase. So at the moment they are toying with token cuts, and hoping for a postponement in the application of the new system.

The first Calgary run at its budget resulted in a tentative decision to slice 40 bodies from the maintenance staff to save about $150,000. That is a far cry, surely from the $3 million that has got to be found. In the next couple of weeks, additional meetings are to be held with the provincial government. In the nature of things, a compromise seems likely. But it will be a temporary reprieve, for the free-spnding days are clearly over for the urban school boards of Alberta.

Where Criticism Is Madness

London Observer

"The two letters to the United Nations which Mrs. Gorbanyevskaya (Russian poet) signed, both complained of the placing of normal people in psychiatric hospitals for their political convictions. No doubt the practice reduces the number of embarrassing political trials. No doubt a lunatic asylum under Brezhnev is preferable to a bullet in the neck under Stalin, though survivors say even a labor camp is better than these political mental homes. The irony of equating criticism with madness remains nonetheless unbearable, a macabre self-indictment of the regime. In such a society, who is really sick?

A Less Prickly China Not Yet a Prodigal Son

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

THE context in which the United States and Communist China met in Warsaw this past week was strikingly different from the one in which their last working session was held two years ago. And most of the changes were in a direction which would encourage agreement. The most dramatic transformation has been in Russian-Chinese relations. In 1968, though there had been serious tension between the two Communist giants for more than 10 years, the quarrel had not reached the point where it threatened nuclear war.

Frye

That point was reached at least twice in 1969: once in March and again in August. Between those crisis peaks, there were (according to the Chinese) 429 lesser incidents. Serious preparations for major war were reported on both sides.

This alone would have been enough to impel China toward a rapprochement with the United States. No country willingly faces major challenges from two sides at once. It does everything feasible to free itself for the main front.

The classic instance of avoiding a two-front war came in 1939 when, before precipitating a war with Britian and France, Nazi Germany signed a treaty with the Soviet Union (the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact) which temporarily neutralized the Red Army.

Awaiting Peking Decision

Whether Peking is prepared to pay any significant price to neutralize the United States remains to be seen. Probably it is not; there is no urgent American threat to be bought off.

But Peking is at least willing that contacts with Washington should take place, and that they should be highly visible. This cannot be explained solely as an effort to embarrass and irritate the Soviet Union.

The next logical step would be peripheral gestures, on both sides, to ease sources of antagonism. The United States already has made several such gestures, and apparently offered at Warsaw to make others, if they were reciprocated: increased trade (notably in food and pharmaceuticals); an exchange of persons, including newspapermen; freer communications.

The second major element of change in the context of China-U.S. relations is suggested by these American offers. It is greater receptivity in Washington for detente with China.

There was a time when Peking offered to free American fliers imprisoned during the Korean War if Washington in turn would let United States newspapermen go to China. This was an extraordinary bargain, with benefits for the United States in both directions; but John Foster Dulles, married to a "policy of boycott" refused.

The contrast between the Dulles era and the current policy of receptivity was highlighted this past week when it became clear that the once-powerful China Lobby has lost its clout in Washington.

This is the other side of the receptivity coin; the Administration is free to seek improved relations with Peking because domestic pressures for total alignment with Formosa have largely dissolved.

The ineffectiveness of the China Lobby was shown in the fact that a squadron of Phantom jet fighters which had been eagerly sought for Formosa by its friends in Congress now almost certainly would not be provided. A less up-to-date plane, the Starfighter, would be substituted.

The United States is by no means prepared to abandon Nationalist China. But neither will Washington let its alliance with Chiang Kai-shek inhibit a rapprochement with Peking — if Peking wants one.

That is, of course, the rub. Whether Peking does in fact want anything more than a line of communication with Washington for use in emergencies, and a threat which might improve her bargaining position vis-a-vis Moscow, is an open question.

But a considerable international effort is being made to tempt Peking genuinely out of her xenophobic isolation of recent years. This is the final, and in some ways the most important element of novelty in conditions surrounding the Warsaw meeting. Several western countries are consciously preparing a red carpet for a reformed China — that is, are preparing to play the generous and forgiving Father if China will play the Prodigal Son.

Ready to Be Generous

Canada and Italy were among the first. Others almost certainly would follow suit promptly if China responded: Belgium, Luxembourg, Austria, and Chile, for example.

There could even be a modest snowball effect, one by-product of which would be an early majority for admission of China to the UN (a simple majority, that is; not the two-thirds majority considered necessary for action).

If China were prepared to live with an independent Formosa, much could be done. But she is not; and until she is, there will be no expectation of an early or dramatic reconciliation of father and prodigal son.

The son has been willing to talk with emissaries from the father's household; he is in danger; but that is all. There is no sign that he has begun to "come to himself."

He certainly is a very long way from saying, "I have sinned and am no more worthy to be called thy son."

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

For an exciting and interesting scramble, go along the river at Goldstream. Beside the highway, there are many small waterfalls and streams that empty into the river. Run-offs from the upper levels and lakes have now made this once small river into a turbulent, white-water series of rapids. Down at the picnic site, it flows from bank to bank, and is a very dark brown, muddy river. There are places where it has washed away gravel bars, and reassembled them in other locations.

Former small islands have vanished and been recreated elsewhere.

Several trees have been uprooted and washed along the bank, helping to make many back-eddies.

New the creek is a fine stream tumbling down over a hundred feet into the pools. When it reaches the highway, it spreads over a wide area creating many little brooks that tumble over the jumble of rocks. Out on the salt flats, when the tide is in, it is almost an arm of the sea, with many small islands dotted around the area. Along the banks, the bodies of dead salmon have been swept up from the bottom and lodged on gravel bars.

The seagulls are still having a feast.

The dense alder and maple growth on both sides of the river has now taken on the appearance of a true rain forest. Here the lichens and mosses are luxuriant, and there are many clumps of Polypody ferns, all dripping from the recent heavy rains. But on the forest floor, clumps of sword ferns show their beautiful green fronds above the pockets of water that are held there.

If you go away from the river, and can attune your ears to listen above the noise of the rushing water, you will hear the musical sounds of the tiny underground rills now tumbling down to the main stream. Perhaps the best way to do this is to place a stick on the ground, and place your ear on the stick. It is most interesting!

Those who saw the same stream during the summer and fall, when the salmon were running, will have difficulty in recognizing it. One wonders how the spate will affect the many thousands of salmon eggs placed in the gravel beds. How many were washed away, and how many managed to survive to hatch out, so that the cycle of life may go on?

RENE LEVESQUE

ROBERT BOURASSA

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The effective leader of the Opposition, very often, sits not in the House of Commons but in the office of the prime minister of Quebec.

A strong leader in Quebec has much to say about the constitutional limits on federal action.

He may exercise a political veto over many Ottawa policies, and, on occasion, dictate national priorities.

★ ★ ★

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau may refuse to consider any form of special status for Quebec. But the fact remains that the leader of Quebec is not a premier like the others, and his consent has to be gained — by concession or coercion — for most major federal initiatives.

The leader of the Opposition can be overruled by a simple vote in the Commons. The premiers of the English-speaking provinces can frequently be ignored without fear of serious national consequences. But when the premier of Quebec dissents, national unity is at once in danger.

Trudeau's hope must be for a government in Quebec strong enough both to overpower the separatists at the polls and to eschew the cheap popularity of nationalism in favor of tackling the formidable problems of economic development.

This means that he must welcome the election of Robert Bourassa as Quebec Liberal leader, as the best choice from a limited field.

Bourassa has many contacts in Ottawa, and likes the city. He has worked as a federal civil servant, most recently as an adviser on tax reform when Mitchell Sharp was finance minister, and knows his way around the federal bureaucracy. When he quit in 1966 to enter Quebec politics, he sold his home here to Paul Hellyer.

Bourassa's style of politics is similar to the Trudeau style and he frankly admits his debt to the prime minister. Trudeau blazed the trail for him, he says, by proving that a relative newcomer with limited experience in politics could make himself acceptable to party and public.

Lacking Trudeau's charisma, Bourassa puts more emphasis on cool, technical competence — a human-computer approach to problem solving which disdains the customary rhetoric of Quebec nationalism.

He is not interested in Quebec becoming master in her own house — for example, taking control of social security — if it is going to cost money the province cannot afford.

He tells young Quebecers that it is not the ideology of separatism but the dollars for economic development which will enable them to have satisfactory careers in their homeland. He speaks directly to the emerging Quebec middle class as one of them.

The principal criticism one hears of Bourassa in Ottawa is that for all his crisp style, he has a soft centre of indecision and lacks political toughness. The redeeming feature is said to be the team around him — many of the same men who backed Trudeau in his campaign in Quebec.

This is not to say that he is regarded as a shoo-in at the next election. There are some shrewd federal Liberals, in fact, who expect to see the party severely beaten, and perhaps penned in Montreal.

Much depends on the Creditistes, who are deciding this month whether to run a major provincial campaign. If they do, they will certainly hurt the Union Nationale in the rural area and siphon off protest votes from the separatists.

But the extraordinary change in the past year is that federal politicians today, when they discuss Quebec, express little fear of the separatists. Trudeau sets the style by saying he is not in the least concerned about the outlook in Quebec. Others say confidently that separatism is declining, and there is speculation about whether even Levesque can find a seat to win.

★ ★ ★

The fact that the Liberal leadership candidates all declared themselves to be federalists and none thought there were votes to be won by even muted nationalism is evidence of the change of atmosphere.

Bourassa's ambitious economic demands, however, might prove no easier for Ottawa to accommodate than the earlier constitutional challenge.

'Reverse Tax' Urged for U.K.

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON — A "reverse income tax" to end poverty in Britain by providing a guaranteed minimum income to each needy family was proposed this week by one of the nation's most important private economic research institutions.

The plan, hardly likely to find acceptance with socialist theoreticians of the Labor Party, would scrap a good deal of the universality of the present welfare state. It would end the national insurance benefits, family allowances and free medical care that now are rendered automatically to all families, regardless of their income.

Policy for Poverty

In return, however, the scheme would remit most of the taxes for those services paid by persons with incomes above the poverty level. That tax remission would, it is calculated, be more than the private insurance and other payments necessary to provide those benefits.

The dual thesis of the "policy for poverty" proposal published by the London-based institute for economic affairs:

● Under the present "cradle to grave" welfare system, poverty has not been eliminated. A reverse income tax plan — of the general nature of that which Chicago economist Milton Friedman is credited with developing — would guarantee the poor a minimum annual income lifting them above the poverty level.

● Families whose incomes are above the poverty level would have their taxes reduced by the amounts they are now paying for the national welfare benefits. The money saved would be more than enough to pay for the medical services they now obtain free and to make up for the other various insurance benefits and income supplements now paid them.

The policy paper was prepared by three British economists and a sociologist, Barbara E. Shenfield of Rockford (Illinois) College.

It calculates the poverty line as a family income where the state benefits received are less than the taxes paid for them. This comes to about $2,400 for families of up to two children, $2,800 for three and $3,840 for four.

It proposes that the state pay, by a reverse income tax, one pound per every pound by which a family's income falls short of that break-even point.

The scheme, therefore, would be frankly based on a means test, a device abhorred in British socialist theory, which holds that welfare benefits should be granted by right to every citizen, regardless of his income status.

The study reckons that about three of Britain's 18 million families live in poverty. To bring them up to an acceptable living standard through the reverse income tax would cost about $240 million a year.

But the annual value of state cash benefits and health service benefits in kind now received by families above the break-even levels is assessed at about 4.56 billion.

$4 Billion Saving

The net saving of the new system, then, would be almost $4 billion, all of which would go toward reducing taxes of families — about two-thirds of the total — who now pay out for the social welfare system more than they receive from it.

The policy paper suggests that the tax remission should be allowed only on a showing by the beneficiary that he has provided through private means — insurance plans, annuities, etc. — for receiving the benefits hitherto renderable to him by the state.

The advantage is seen in lower cost and particularly freedom of choice in the amounts and suppliers of welfare services, but without forfeiting protection against imprudence.

The Mysteries of Migration

By IRSTON R. BARNES

The migrations of birds, spring and fall, seem to most observers to be remarkable beyond comprehension. And when to the basic fact of movement between summer and winter ranges is added the fact that individual birds return to specific localities successive years for nesting and for wintering, the birds' mastery of geography appears complete.

●

No aspect of the migration mystery is more challenging than the unanswered question of how birds find their way over great distances. What are the essentials of their navigational powers?

This unsolved mystery has given rise to a host of theories which, in recent years, have been repeatedly tested by field and laboratory experiments until even serious students have difficulty in knowing the present state of research.

Thus all who are interested in animal and bird behavior are indebted to G. V. T. Mathews for the new edition of Bird Navigation (Cambridge University Press, 197 pages, $7.cloth or $2.45 paper).

The new edition is in reality a new work, supplementing his 1955 volume of the same title. It presents a critical survey of experimental work during the intervening 23 years and performs an invaluable service in evaluating the state of knowledge in this involved area.

Dr. Matthews is director of research at the Windfowl Trust, Slimbridge, England. He is certainly the foremost specialist in bird navigation. While he writes primarily for other scientists, serious amateurs will find this compact volume the most convenient means of being informed respecting new developments.

Bird Navigation provides no final explanation of the undoubted navigational powers of birds, but it offers a solid basis for informed judgments.

The remarkable migratory journeys of many birds, particularly such long over-ocean flights as the Golden Plover's, the Great Shearwater's and the Arctic Tern's, establish that migrants are able to fly complex courses appropriate to the season, and that adults are able to return quite precisely to familiar breeding and nesting territories and to traditional winter quarters.

The recognized capabilities have stimulated numerous theories, some quite esoteric, about birds' navigational capabilities. These theories, both the plausible and the implausible, have been subjected to extensive testing during the past two decades.

In field investigations, birds have been displaced during migration, tested for their ability to return to their normal courses, tested for their ability to home to their nests, traced with electronic devices, followed by light planes, and of course, observed on radar screens.

Hand-reared and wild birds have been elaborately tested in ingenious laboratory devices for orientation and for responses to selected external stimuli, even using a planetarium to simulate different sky patterns.

Birds have been conditioned to false times and false locations, and tested for orientation in familiar and unfamiliar surroundings.

●

In homing experiments it has been established that birds home successfully on the basis of navigational powers from beyond minimum distances. But there is no evidence that birds have any direct sensory contact with home or make use of an inertial navigation system. Likewise no case has been made for navigation by geophysical grids using lines of magnetic force or cariolis force.

Most promising are theories for navigation by astronomical grids, using probably the stars and certainly the sun's cordinates in conjunction with inherent biological clocks and memory.

Both field and laboratory tests indicate that inherent capabilities, modified by learning, permit "bi-coordinate navigation," "as a flexible ability . . . enabling the bird to return to where it should be at any particular season."

Dr. Matthews' authoritative evaluation of recent research into the migration and homing of birds makes bird navigation of highest interest to all who wish to know more about this most complex aspect of bird behavior.

Bail Reforms Must Go Further

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Pain from a cancer can be tempered; yet the cancer can remain. An inequitable bail system can be made to work more equitably; yet the system can remain inequitable.

Last week Toronto Metro Police instituted a system under which desk sergeants are allowed to release accused persons solely on their promise to turn up in court the next day.

Introduction of the new system was made possible by an amendment to the Criminal Code. Previously, an accused could be released only after a justice of the peace had granted bail.

Within the context of the existing bail system the innovation is a significant step forward.

But it can be applauded only as a temporary measure because the system itself is unjust and ineffective and needs to be changed.

The moment the accused steps into court the following morning, the bail system remains as it was. The trial may occur immediately or a date may be set for trial, and the judge will then decide whether bail will be granted and on what terms.

Prejudice to Poor

The existing bail system has been condemned by many. The latest are two Toronto lawyers, Sidney Linden and Joel Goldenberg, who were projected directors of the Amicus Foundation, a Toronto bail research project conducted from 1966 to 1968.

"We would point out," they said, "that the present bail system works to the prejudice of the poor citizen, but to the advantage of the professional criminal. This latter class is well aware of the workings of the bail system and the existence of the bail bondsmen."

The system "keeps people in custody who should not be in custody; it allows people out of custody who perhaps should not be free pending trial; it does not appear to have any greater reliability than release on recognizance without deposit; and it imposes punishment before trial."

"Either a man can be trusted to return to court or he cannot," they said. "If he cannot, then he should be detained in custody to await trial which should be expedited. It is almost as simple as that.

"How do you determine whether a man can be trusted? You assume that every man can be trusted, just as you assume that every man is innocent, and you ask the Crown Attorney to adduce evidence to the contrary in those cases where he is able to."

Burden of Proof

Justice Minister John Turner has promised reforms. "We are going to put the burden of proof on the Crown to show why bail should not be granted and eliminate the cash bail concept," he said.

"We will require the judge or magistrate to ask two questions. First: 'If I let a man out on bail, will he show up for his trial?' Second: 'Will he place the safety of his fellow citizens in jeopardy?' These are two questions that always have to be asked, but they ought to be asked on their merits and not be related to whether someone can put up a bond or money."

Mr. Linden and Mr. Goldenberg caution that the new system should not be placed on an all-or-nothing basis — either freedom or imprisonment.

There should be flexibility for dealing with exceptional cases, they say. For instance, surety might by required in cases where a great deal of money is involved and the accused is released.

This kind of flexibility seems reasonable enough, provided that it is restricted to exceptional cases. The system as described by Mr. Turner would otherwise be more than adequate — if he would only get on with the job of introducing it.

Stanley Cup, Here We Come—Slowly

By ART STOTT

Stott

My friend who runs the Montreal Canadiens from Victoria, sending the necessary messages to owner Senator Hartland Molson, general manager Sam Pollock and coach Claude Ruel by mental telepathy, is trying to relieve my anxiety over the way the team is playing this season.

"Don't worry," he tells me when I wonder audibly if the great aggregation, which some consider French Canada's most significant cultural contribution to the nation, has reached the climax that eventually destroyed the invincibility of the Yankees in American baseball.

"Don't worry," he repeats. "We've got all sorts of young stuff coming up. We're loaded with talent, though it's getting tougher, what with expansion, to keep it hidden in the weeds as easily as it used to be. Some of the other teams are digging it out. But don't worry."

★ ★ ★

Then he goes into a sort of trance and I know telepathic communication is under way from Victoria to the big men of Montreal's Forum. Only occasionally do I imagine that the extra-sensory perception mechanism is growing a little dull at the other end and the messages are not getting through clearly.

My spirits have been buoyed somewhat by very private knowledge I possess that could give inspiration to the Canadiens, restore to them the flair, the dash, the elan that have been their hallmark.

I know, and only I know, that we have in the far west the prospective super-star who can light the fire, a player so fresh and small that it is easy to hide him among the snowdrops and crocus blooms of this place to which spring comes first. Scouts of other teams know nothing about him. But there is a problem in delivering him to Montreal. I watched him critically during this week's minor hockey night at the Memorial Arena and, frankly, he isn't quite ready yet.

This confession is a source of some disappointment. Since the beginning of the season, when he received his first pair of skates, pads, pants that are too big for him, and a hockey stick, he has been confiding his abilities to me. In walking shoes, on a secluded section of our beach, he has proved to me that he can skate like Maurice Richard in his heyday. He can stop like four-wheel hydraulic brakes, turn on a dime, dipsy-doodle, break into high gear in one and one-half strides, stick-handle like Frank Fredrickson used to and shoot like Bobby Hull—and all without a stick or a puck. Beyond that he has the instincts of Bobby Orr and the deft sureness of Gordie Howe. All this is pretty good for a boy of eight.

There is a slight difficulty when he turns out with the other "pups" of the minorest hockey league. He needs his stick to act as the third leg of a tripod to keep him upright. When the puck comes his way and he raises his stick to handle it, he sits down. It is hard to dash up the ice in a lightning drive on the seats of one's pants. And it is a little disconcerting not to know, within an arc of 359 degrees, where the puck is going when he contacts it.

The situation is not as dismaying as it may seem. Muzz and Lynn Patrick weren't too adept on skates and with hockey sticks the first few times they tried, but both managed to enjoy distinguished careers in the NHL. As the home of a Stanley Cup team in the 'twenties, it seems to me reasonable that stars will again rise from this part of the world. And the Thursday night show at the arena indicates the progress that can be made locally. The bigger kids could skate, could stick-handle and could shoot, proving the development that can occur after two or three seasons' play under the dedicated coaching and organization of a group of men who are giving up their free time to helping the boys attain proficiency. There's no particular reason, as I see it, why the West Coast, including Victoria, can't send more of the likes of John Ferguson down to help my favorite team.

The problem, as I see it in my anxiety to help the Canadiens, is time. Help's on the way, but it isn't immediately available from this source. Maybe the man who runs the Stanley Cup champions by telepathy from Victoria will stir the Montreal management to dig out that hidden talent secreted in the weeds. They could, perhaps, hold the fort until our boys are ready.

In the meantime, we're on the make. No one, I'll wager, has a greater opportunity to show more improvement in hockey than the tads I watched Thursday night. Of nothing am I more sure than that they will improve.

Hang on, Hartland, Sam and Claude. Our boys are coming. And in the meantime, hone up those extra-sensory perceptions so my friend can help you with his telepathic advice more effectively.

Jon Voight: Fear and Insecurity Came Easy

By LAURENCE DOBIE

"Beg pardon, Ma'am, I'm looking for the Statue of Liberty," says Jon Voight as Joe Buck, the young hustler, in "Midnight Cowboy," trying his first pick-up in New York. "I beg your pardon, sergeant," shouts Voight as "A," in his new film, "The Revolutionary," set in a nameless country.

Actually, after the success of "Cowboy" and the praise heaped on him for Buck, Voight isn't begging anyone's pardon any more.

Since he has sprung on the public so suddenly, a few facts. He isn't the fresh-faced kid one might imagine from "Cowboy."

He's 30 and divorced, the son of a golf pro ("I guess he wanted me to be the president of the United States — but that was before anyone knew what the job was going to be like") and grew up in Yonkers, N.Y. He has two brothers, one a lecturer and the other a record producer.

He was brought up as a Catholic and ironically it was two priests, the first at school and the second at Catholic University in Washington, where he took a fine arts degree, who introduced him to acting — ironically because he has left the church.

"I just walked away from certain things. I don't want to hurt the feelings of a lot of people, but I think much of it's baloney. There's an awful lot of information around and I don't see how any one group can claim to have it all.

"And I suppose you could say I'm against organizations and authority — being told not to fish on a friday, what a sin is — but then there might be groups I'd support at certain times."

After acting classes he entered the New York jungle. Getting jobs was tough. The soft voice and blue eyes harded with hidden experience: "and degrading."

But he was luckier than many in working most of the time, Off-Broadway and on TV. And for four years he dreamt of playing Joe Buck. John Schlesinger dreamt just as long of directing a movie of James Leo Herlihy's unlikely book.

When Schlesinger finally set up the movie, Voight tried for the part. The producer turned him down flat.

Another actor was cast for the role. By a long, hard grind and luck — Jennifer Salt, the daughter of Waldo Salt, who wrote the script of "Cowboy" (she played the girl in Texas in "Cowboy" and now co-stars with Voight in "Revolutionary") had seen him in Harold Pinter's "Dwarfs" on TV and fallen for him, and the casting director of "Cowboy" remembered him from the TV series "Gunsmoke" — he pried a screen test out of Schlesinger, who was convinced "John took a chance. It could have been a disaster," says Voight now.

To get the "real dumb" drawl for Joe he went to Texas and took coaching lessons from an old-time comedian who had a genius for American regional accents.

To get the fear that is in Joe's eyes from the opening shot he didn't need any coaching: "Hell, I've been scared of everything since I was born."

To get the insecurity, he remembered, perhaps, the jungle; "people who really want to be accepted all the time come on strong. They're on their guard, always asking themselves 'Am I doing all right?' And they need someone to tell them they are.

"Joe tries all the time and that's why he's driven to violence at the end, when he stuffs the telephone into the homosexual's mouth, because he's had it right up to here. He says to himself 'Jesus, this is really not right because I've done my best for chrissake.'"

Is there a sentimentality at the heart of the conception of Joe? Wouldn't someone from his deprived background be more brutal in his relationships? "If you mean wouldn't a young guy coming into New York to hustle be less good-natured, more vicious, then maybe you're right. But I think there are people like Joe around." He smiles disarmingly. "And remember, we were just telling a story. It's a fim."

After "Cowboy" he played Milo Minderbender in Mike Nichols's film of "Catch 22" — still uncompleted. Then what? The Hollywood offers were rolling in. "But Jon has a strong inner will, strong enough for instance, to resist the advice of his agent," says someone who has worked with him.

So his choice has been an odd mixture of Joe Buckish quixotry and shrewd self-interest; quixotic because "Revolutionary" is a small-budget film being shot on location in England by two young movie-makers he's worked with before, and he's doing it on "deferred payment" (if the film makes money he gets paid, if it doesn't neither does he); and self-interest because it's a good, unusual part.

The producer and director of "Revolutionary" are Edward Pressman and Paul Williams, both 25. Pressman majored in philosophy at Standford, and Williams in psychology at Harvard. They met while both were doing postgraduate work in England, Pressman at the London School of Economics and Williams at Cambridge.

They decided that all they really wanted to do was make films, gave up their university work, and managed to shoot "Out of It," Pressman putting up $350,000 of his own money.

•

Voight was in it. United Artists has picked up "Out of "It for release, and given Pressman and Williams a three-picture deal, of which "Revolutionary" is the first.

It's about a young middle-class student who finds himself drawn into radical politics and ends in an extreme anarchist group. If that sounds like a cneap, commerical attempt to exploit the headlines, it isn't. It's a serious study of the intellectual who wants to overturn the existing order, scripted by Hans Koningsberger from his own novel

Voight doesn't know what he's going to do next, except take a holiday in Spain to think things over. He's not even committed to a film career and has an idea for opening a theatre in the U.S. "to give employment to my friends and have fun.

"No, I don't want to play Hamlet. I couldn't bring anything to it at the moment and I have to find truth, a little bit of it, in a part. Maybe I should do Lear, get it over with and take up plumbing. I don't want to be a special person, a specimen."

It sounds as though he is still looking for the Statue of Liberty.

STEINBECK NOVEL TURNED INTO OPERA

SEATTLE — The world premiere of the opera "Of Mice and Men" was received favorably here Thursday, with one critic describing the opera as "a major and significant new work."

The opera, by Carlisle Floyd, follows the John Steinbeck novel of the same name.

As presented by the Seattle Opera Association, the work was described by Rolf Stromberg, critic for the Post-Intelligencer, as "startlingly dramatic despite the use of colloquial language, and a thoroughly integrated work . . . The music is modern.

The Lovers Try to Be Sincere

By JUDITH MARTIN

WASHINGTON — America's sweethearts, Tiny Tim and Miss Vicki, have set up housekeeping at the Shoreham Hotel where he is singing this week.

They have their raw spinach cooling on the balcony, and Miss Vicki reports that she is kept busy looking after the laundry.

The happy couple, who were married a month ago on television's Tonight show, had a small shadow cross their horizon Tuesday, but they dealt bravely with it.

They discovered they were not going to be able to sit side-by-side at a press luncheon in the hotel, and while Miss Vicki asked in disbelief, "I can't sit next to my husband?" Tiny Tim sadly but firmly gave her back five of her fingers and went to his place.

She said she can't cook. But then he says he can't eat cooked foods. She said that packing and unpacking is about the extent of her housekeeping and it takes her all day. But then he says he loves living in hotels. He said he couldn't eat any lunch. She had a salad and afterwards she sprayed her breath with a pocket vial.

Best of all, he said, she is patient.

"I'm hard to live with," he said, over her frantic denials. "Oh, yes," holding up a hand, "I have many moods. Sometimes I spend a whole day with my ear against a phonograph, sometimes all day with my cosmetics.

"Every time I look at her," he was moved to say four times during the course of the luncheon," "I swoon."

Eventually, they plan to find an apartment in New York, and as for children, if they have none "it won't be because I stopped them," said Tiny Tim, who does not believe in birth control.

His philosophy of marriage, he said, taking out a pocket Bible, is that "woman is subject to man, because man was created from the Lord, and woman was created from man, but man departed from the scriptural teachings and became a beast. Be humble, do not depart from the teachings, and you can't lose."

Her philosophy is, she said, "same as his."

He also talked about his musical career. "I started wearing my hair long in 1954. I was singing legitimately and nothing happened. I needed a change in style and I heard some Rudy Vallee records and said, 'You've got to start singing higher.' I don't copy anyone, but the essence of it comes over me, like perfume. I found a new voice, a blessing from Heaven and I felt the hair should go along with it. Like the Dodgers, I needed a change in style."

And for Miss Vicki's career, she modestly says, "There's none I could have. I can't do anything." She had been in love before she met Tiny Tim, she acknowledged, but she had never thought she would get married. "I never knew there could be anyone like him."

He didn't think she would accept him, he said, twisting the big gold wedding ring and the bloodstone ring—commemorating the day they got their blood tests—on his other hand. For her, he gave up alcohol, and for her he learned to sing rock occasionally.

"The good Lord blesses those who try to be sincere," Tiny Tim said. "I say what Al Smith said in 1924—'take a look at the record.'"

Bus-loads of students from Nanaimo, Lake Cowichan and Sooke will be among those heading for the McPherson Playhouse, Feb. 3, 5 and 9.

Shakespeare's comedy is the first of Bastion's current Youth Theatre series.

Student night curtain time is 8. Public performances which begin Feb. 6 with a coffee party at which the Actors' Committee invites the audience to meet the cast, will have the usual 8:30 p.m. curtain time.

To point up the timeliness-timelessness of Shakespeare, director Peter Mannering is costuming this production in mod dress, but not to worry, purists — Shakespeare's pointed, witty, often ribald immortal language has not been changed.

Karen Austin plays the heroine, Rosalind and Barry Flatman appears as her lover, Orlando. Others in featured roles are Jack Droy, Stuart Kent and Don Jacobs.

"Rude strength has fallen before treacherous weakness." A scene from The Father with, left to right, Harriet Allen, John Krich and Patricia Lieth.

'Father' Strong Stuff

The destructive forces of love-hate-fear intermingled, the ruthless manoeuvring of a mother faced with the arbitrary separation of her child, are the powerful threads from which August Strindberg created The Father.

This is a play that is compelling, haunting and in a sense, as terrifying as a nightmare.

Its production, coming up Jan. 31 — Feb. 7, is the second University of Victoria-Theatre Guild collaboration at Langham Court Theatre.

The mother, Laura, who connives in the most fiendish way to circumvent the father's legitimate authority over their daughter's immediate future, is played by Patricia Wainman-Wood.

She is, says director Wandalie Henshaw, the archetype of such modern heroines as Martha in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf.

But there is another level to the play. Through the father, a scientist, Strindberg depicts the futility of reason under assault by the dark forces of primitive emotion.

John Kirch will be seen in the role of the bedeviled father. Victorians last saw this fine actor as King Claudius in Hamlet and the brother-in-law, Cleante, in Tartuffe.

★ ★ ★

The Father is a striking contrast to the last successful combined production which was the comedy, The Playboy of the Western World.

University of Victoria design student Pat Scott has created a fine atmosphere-invoking 19th century set and Allan Granstrom who has designed all costumes for Uvic productions for the last year-and-a-half, has again provided the wardrobe.

Box office for the production opens at Eaton's Wednesday. The hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Curious Censorship

TORONTO — In the province of Quebec, censors snipped one-and-a-half minutes of footage out of the Swedish sex-and-sociology film "I Am Curious (Yellow)" before allowing it to be shown last year.

But in Ontario, where the film was approved by the censors last week, "less than 60 seconds" has been judged improper for the film-going public.

The cuts in Ontario are not the same as the ones in Quebec.

After Him, World Was Never the Same

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Most scientists today would not dispute that Charles Darwin's voyage on H.M.S. Beagle in 1831 was as important to world knowledge as Columbus' on the Santa Maria.

And yet how many school children know about the voyage? How many popular books have been written on the man for the young? Not many. Is it because he wrote the Origin of the Species — one of the most revolutionary books of all time?

It's a pity because Darwin the naturalist and thinker is a rare sort of man—saint and hero combined. He was compassionate. He had an unbiased mind and was a man of transparent honesty. He loved truth.

DARWIN AND THE BEAGLE, By Alan Moorehead. Thomas Nelson. $15.

His reactions to the brutal treatment of Negro slaves on his visit to South America is typical of the man.

"It makes one's blood boil, yet heart tremble, to think that we Englishmen and our American descendants with their boastful cry of liberty have been so guilty . . ." He was 23 when he made this observation.

To understand the impact his works had on man's mind one should go back in time 140 years. The accepted belief then was that every species had come into being at the same instant. (In the year 4004 B.C)

After he published in 1859 his world-shaking theory of evolution, based on observations and studies he had made years earlier on the voyage of the Beagle, the world was never the same.

Today Darwin is recognized as the man who provided a foundation for the entire structure of modern biology.

But this book doesn't deal with his treaties and theories, rather with his adventures aboard the Beagle. It took him to Brazil, Argentina, Tierra del Fuego, Chile, Peru, the Galapagos Islands, Tahiti, New Zealand, Australia and other countries.

He was 23 when he accepted the post of naturalist aboard the Royal Navy survey vessel. Her captain, Robert FitzRoy, plays an important role in the book. A fundamentalist by faith, he was quite the opposite in character, but nevertheless a great navigator.

The Young Charles Darwin (Age 32)

Here is a wealthy man's son, who loves riding, hunting, good times and the comforts of life. He is in love with a woman but decides to undertake a quest — a search for knowledge and truth — before marrying and settling down.

Today it isn't unusual for young men to travel, but in Darwin's young days it wasn't a pastime of the wealthy. Except for Europe, travelling to distant lands and uncharted seas involved too many risks, hardships and discomforts.

There were no wonder drugs to cope with influenza, typhoid, cholera, smallpox and a host of other diseases. When death came, it came quickly.

Men travelled to distant lands to start a new life, to seek fame or fortune and to propagate the Christian faith. Darwin sought none of these. He was searching for knowledge and had no idea what was in store for him in later years.

By contrast, FitzRoy could look forward to promotion and knighthood.

That Darwin also endured severe hardships at sea is no exaggeration. Anyone who has suffered from sea-sickness will know what he went through. He was always ill at sea.

"Heaven protect and fortify my poor stomach," he wrote to one of his sisters as the Beagle set off from South America for New Zealand.

But the unpaid naturalist stuck it out, when he could have quit and returned home anytime.

His only respite from sea-sickness and the discomforts of living in cramped quarters aboard the Beagle came when he was ashore on expeditions collecting specimens. But even on land he roughed it. He explored jungles and rivers and climbed mountains.

On one of his great inland journeys in South America, he and a few Gauchos rode 500 miles across the unexplored Argentine pampas. The plains were then inhabited by Indians who were fighting for their very existence against the whites.

Darwin throughout his travels never ceased to wonder at the beauty of nature.

His ability to see through things — his power of imagination — was exemplified when he showed how the coral atolls in the Pacific were formed.

He theorized the islands were formed by volcanoes rising from the sea thousands of years ago. They then began to sink about a foot a century, but as they sank, coral built up around the rims, forming first barrier reefs and then atolls.

An American writer in the National Geographic Magazine said that had Darwin contributed nothing else, his name would have been permantly inscribed in the annals of science.

■

The story of the Beagle ends with Darwin returning to England and marrying the girl he loves. The romantic part of his life ended at this point. Darwin did not live a normal life for the remainder of his years. He suffered from a malady believed to have originated from a poisonous insect's bite.

He died in April 1882.

This is a book which can and should be read by all age groups. Moorehead does an excellent job of narrating the story of the Beagle, describing the countries visited through Darwin's eyes.

The book is also enhanced by colorful zoological, botanical and topographical illustrations, in the form of colored engravings. They were selected almost entirely from contemporary and near contemporary sources.

The oil paintings and water colors from Augustus Earle and Conrad Martens, the artists who took part in the voyage, are also most interesting.

Japanese Exodus in 1942

In Cold Blood By Committee

By GEORGE OAKE

Once upon a time, 'way back in 1967, when every Canadian organization hired a committee to write a book about something, the Canadian Citizenship Branch, Department of the Secretary of State, decided they would get in the production line, too.

The citizenship people had a good idea; they wanted to pay tribute in centennial year to the ethnic groups which comprise the Canadian people, and to draw attention to the notable contributions that the groups have made to the development of Canada.

Like many good ideas, it floundered in committee and ended up a statistical dossier of 48 ethnic groups — everybody, in fact, from Americans to Welsh and West Indians. Funny you should think that. Yes, there are about 283,908 persons of American birth residing in Canada according to the 1961 census, compared with 25,000 West Indians listed in the 1966 census.

Immigration policy is naturally a subject that the citizenship branch doesn't dwell upon. Readers are told in passing that East Indians, Chinese and a few other colored peoples were not always welcome in Canada but nowhere is there an explanation of Canada's discriminatory immigration policies.

The quintessence of this offhand arrogance occurs in the chapter on Japanese-Canadians. (It is difficult to avoid hyphenated Canadiansims when writing about a book like this.)

The reader is informed that Japanese-Canadians were moved inland because, for strategic reasons, the coastal area of British Columbia became a protected area. Then in one of the most blatant understatements of the last decade the authors say, "The more even distribution of the Japanese over the whole country has made it easier for them to become integrated into Canadian life."

THE CANADIAN FAMILY TREE — Edited by Merle Storey and Borgny Pearson. Queen's Printer, cloth-bound, $5; paperback, $3.

And I'll bet that a day doesn't go by in which Canadians of Japanese descent don't thank the Canadian government for distributing them more evenly — like butter, not people — over the whole country. Gee-whiz, the government sure knew what was good for folks back in '42.

Perhaps the saddest thing about this book is that it could have been very good. The basic material was there but nobody cared enough to paste a little humanity around the skeletons.

Chapters are broken down under the headings like "early settlement," "post-war immigration," "institutions and organizations" and "contributions to Canadian life."

The fact that a Dutch mother in Saskatoon was concerned about retarded children is not interesting in itself. Maybe a few stories about Dutch mothers and Armenian violinists might have helped.

As it is, editorial writers will yawn through the chapters on dog days and social studies classes will turn off Canadian history forever as they scratch a few notes under the heading "institutions and organizations."

A few perceptive students may notice that Canada's immigration needs have been very well served by world upheavals. At the turn of the century when we needed farmers to open up our hinterlands that's what we got because czars and dictators throughout Europe were making it difficult to earn a kopek.

After the Second World War we needed professionals and technicians to carry on our burgeoning industry. The communists obliged by making it hard for the bourgeoisie in Europe. Now all we have to wait for is some world upheaval that sends us people who know how to write books about people.

Personal History as Fiction

By MARION JENKINS

At the beginning of this penetrating novel about the Wendall family—"them"—the author describes her book as "a work of history in fictional form—that is, in personal perspective, which is the only kind of history that exists." Such a view contributes to the success of the novel.

It was while teaching at the University of Detroit that Miss Oates met the "Maureen Wendall" of the narrative. Her complex nature and struggles incited the author to record, verbatim, Maureen's numerous recollections.

From the initial feeling that this person's life "must be fiction, this can't all be real," Miss Oates came to the conclusion that "this is the only kind of fiction that is real"

For the author, such a personal history developed into a perceptive novel; for Maureen, who lives today in Michigan, such a "confession" was a form of psychological therapy.

The novel takes place in Detroit and its environs between 1937-1967. Through such a setting, which ranges from the Depression of the thirties to the violence of the sixties, the author effectively shows how the surroundings and the events happening during those years pressed, in a devastating way, on the lives of her characters.

Although "them" refers specifically to the Wendalls—Loretta, Maureen and Jules—it also refers to the problems which confronted these characters. Such conflicts arose not only from their background and environment, but even more so from their own personal needs.

THEM by Joyce Carol Oates. Copp Clark. $8.95.

Loretta Wendall—the mother of the family—comes from an insecure background. Her alcoholic father ends his life in an asylum, while her own difficulties begin when her brother Brock shoots her youthful lover. From this catastrophe, described dramatically at the very beginning of the novel, Loretta suddenly emerges as a woman, having married the policeman in whom she confided the murder.

When her husband loses his job, Loretta loses her temporary security and undergoes further disillusionments. With the birth of her children, she seems to attain some degree of normalcy, until they begin to grow up and grow apart from each other.

Through their lives, however, regardless of their individual differences, they continue to be held together by a family bond of love and hatred.

The children, as well as their mother, never seem to be able to escape their background, nor themselves, no matter how hard they try. If they succeed at all, as Maureen does to some extent by marrying a teacher, it is at the expense of someone or something else.

Maureen, a "loner" in the family, is like Jules, her older brother, with whom she has a close affinity. She tries to escape from her family's poverty, as well as from her tedious domestic circumstances, increased by her father's death and her mother's remarriage, by secretly carrying out her own search for security. She prostitutes herself and hides her earnings in a book.

When the money is discovered by her violent stepfather, she is beaten into a senseless state, resulting in temporary insanity. After this climactic episode, while slowly recovering, Maureen writes to the author exploring her problems. In this part of the book, such letters, though seeming incredible, poignantly give a more personal and realistic picture of this struggling character.

At the same time one gains insight into Maureen's growing character, Jules is being portrayed in alternative chapters. Like his family in their desires, yet different in the means of achieving them, he tries constantly to change his life.

Yet such attempts also result in catastrophes, particularly the crucial one in which the woman he loves most and who loves him passionately almost brings about both their deaths.

Jules, like Maureen after her traumatic experience, slips into a lethargic state. Eventually he, too, emerges, realizing that he must be "free of himself" and live his life. Yet one wonders, even though he becomes involved in a new life, whether the whole cycle of trying and failing will follow.

OATES

As Miss Oates states in the author's note, the lives of these characters "pressed upon mine eerily, so that I began to dream about them instead of about myself . . . yet because their world was so remote from me it entered me with tremendous power, and in a sense the novel wrote itself"

It is this involvement and the perceptive way in which it is conveyed that makes the novel remarkable, since the reader, throughout the narrative, also becomes immersed in the lives, as well as the surroundings of these characters.

Books

A New Collection By Local Poets

By AUDREY JOHNSON

As a record of a group working together to encourage and evolve poetic writings, a chapbook will inevitably present some unevenness of quality.

It will also, with less inevitability but quite frequently, reveal some well above average talent and make a clear statement concerning the aims and general scholarship of the group.

VICTORIA POETRY CHAPBOOK. Published by Poetry Group, Canadian Authors' Association, Victoria and Islands Branch. $1.50.

This Victoria Poetry Chapbook — No. 6 in an interrupted sequence — falls well within the pattern.

There has been a long gap since the first five chapbooks came out between 1935 and 1942. Resumption of the publication is, I believe, a wise and welcome move.

Forty-five poems are included in a variety of forms and styles from free verse to the formal sonnet and arbitrarily compact haiku.

Reading through the slender, paper-bound volume one is immediately arrested by the hauntingly sweet music of three poems by Pauline Havard — particularly recalling that she had appeared as a very young poet of considerable promise in the earlier volumes.

Jean F. Flatt has contributed two poems in Frosty Midnight and Storm Signals, that convey a real and haunting atmosphere. Still another really beautiful and evocative nature piece is the poem, Symphony, by Michael G. Coleman.

Clara Hill Maunsell's Lincoln Cathedral Floodlit, and her New Zealand piece, Jade Waters, are examples of the most polished craft to be found in the book.

Another is encompassed in the group of poems by Doris Ferne.

But for freshness of metaphor I would find it hard to select a better example than Edith M. Rive's characterization of the wind as ". . . a lad on tiptoe, prowling, eager, on the run . . ." And further on in the same short poem; "Or Mercury, volplaning by on slender, driven feet, to turn, a roaring bully, wild and brawling in the street."

The book's printing leaves much to be desired. It has, for one thing, been bound before the ink was dry, margins are not even and are here and there badly crowded.

Editing also leaves something to be desired as the book has more than its excusable share of spelling mistakes.

Still it is good to see the Victoria Poetry Chapbook back. It is available now in book stores around the city.

The Compleat (Almost) Van Gogh

By GORDON RICE

Unless you're rich, a librarian, or a really dedicated fan of Van Gogh you're not going to plunk down $46 for this book. On the other hand, any one seriously interested in the artist will want to see it eventually.

The author is an art historian who has studied Van Gogh's life and art for over 50 years, and written nearly 100 articles and books on the artist, as well as a play based on his life.

VINCENT VAN GOGH by Marc Tralbaut. Macmillan. $46.

He has made it his business to read everything by and about Van Gogh, know about everyone who knew anything about him, and go everywhere the artist happened to set foot.

Obviously the book is an important piece of research. More than this, it is well written and easy to read; prosaic, sensible, and thorough. It does not purport to be a biography, but rather a "commentary on the important facts of Van Gogh's life."

There are some important new insights on the artist's life here, as a result of the author's researches, and some old myths dispelled, or at least brought into question.

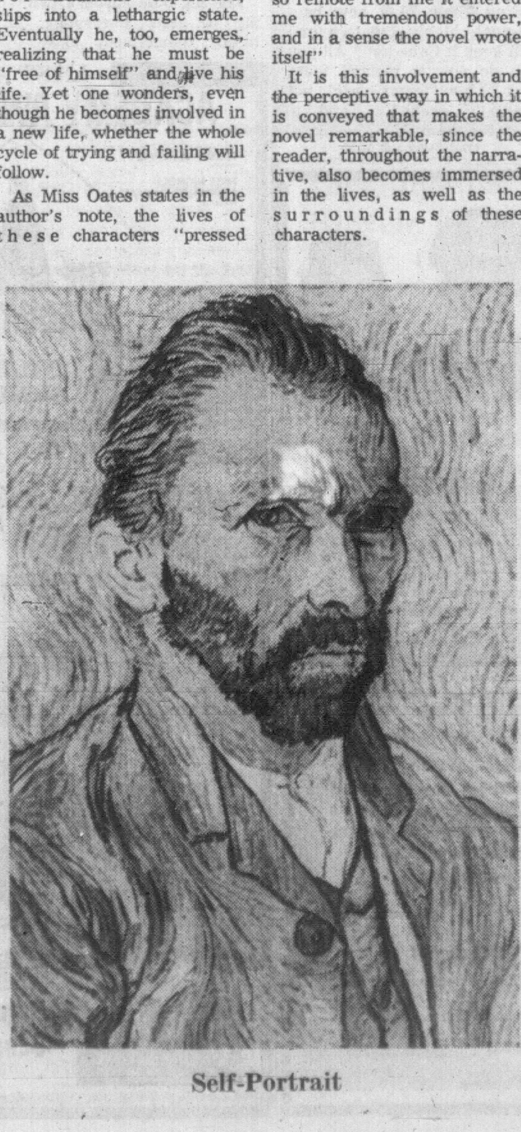
Tralbaut makes it clear that he feels the best biography of Van Gogh remains the artist's three-volume collection of letters.

While this may be true, it is pleasant to discover that no pre-requisite material on Van Gogh need be read before the reader begins on this text.

This will not be the best source-book on Van Gogh's pictures, however, as the price might lead one to think. It is an important source in that it reproduces many early and even some previously unknown drawings and paintings of the artist's. These little known works are interesting, but of course are included at the expense of excluding a great many of the artist's better works.

Now the better known work has been reproduced many times, but unfortunately not always reproduced well. The fine, tipped-in color plates here give only a selection of Van Gogh's best, late work, but with these reproductions we can see what we've missed in other books on the artist.

The prints in Tralbaut's work are very clear, very fine in detail. The color, so often distorted in other books, seems quite convincing. Accompanying photographs of people involved with the artist and sites of his pictures provide some additional interest to the text.



Self-Portrait

WILDLIFE PAIR

By CLIFFORD CARL

The Life Nature Library series of books which was launched some years ago has proved so popular that from time to time revised editions of some have appeared. Among these are one on the wildlife of North America and another on mammals of the world, each an excellent example of the series.

LAND AND WILDLIFE OF NORTH AMERICA; also THE MAMMALS. Time-Life Books.

Without doubt the popularity of this set of publications is due to the outstanding illustrations, most in color, which have been drawn from world-wide sources and which are consequently of the highest quality.

Marginal illustrations, often in the form of diagrams and with essay-type captions also add greatly to the interest and provide an easy way of skimming through each book, while the text, written by an authority in the particular field, provides detail and "meat" for the reader who wishes to delve more deeply into the subject.

This clever combination of pictures and words presented in an eye-catching format guarantees that the series will continue to appeal to people of all ages; copies should be in every library from kindergarten to college.

THE BOLSHOI SWAN LAKE GOES MODERN

MOSCOW— The Moscow Bolshoi Theatre enters the 1970s with a new and more Westernized look for its time-honored and famous ballet Swan Lake.

Choreographer Yuri Grigorovich said he wants to satisfy both traditional and more modern minded enthusiasts, but the new version given its first performance Christmas Day was more simple than in the past.

Tchaikovsky's Swan ballet received its premiere at the Bolshoi in 1877. But now the fairy tale gives the prince greater dancing opportunities and upgrades the role of the evil spirit who turns girls into swans and keeps them in his power.

The ballet's traditional feathered hats are out and so is the thunder-and-lightning struggle between the prince and the evil spirit, now replaced with a more symbolic triumph of the forces of evil.

FINGER in every pie keeps Dolly Levi active and sparkling but her real interest is in her role as matchmaker. She's the heroine of the hit musical, Hello Dolly, which as a production of the UBC Musical Theatre Society comes to McPherson Playhouse Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Starring in the role is Dolores Kirkwood, recently returned to Canada from the University of Oregon where she was resident choreographer and appeared in five musicals, including South Pacific and Oh, What a Lovely War.

Suddenly The Stage Is Crowded

It never rains but . . . as the saying goes.

After a drought in live stage shows for the past six or seven weeks — other than The Pied Piper — within the compass of less than a week Victoria is saturated with three — one play, one pantomime and one musical.

The pantomime comes first, with two shows on Monday at 6 and 8:30 p.m.

It is modeled on Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs and is reputed to be a first-class replica of the traditional British panto.

It comes from the highly reputed White Rock Players and has already played with outstanding success to 10,000 people in White Rock and Vancouver.

SNOW WHITE

Snow White will be seen at McPherson Playhouse.

Also at the McPherson for four performances, Thursday, Friday and Saturday with matinee, is that gutsy musical of Yonkers in the gay nineties, Hello Dolly.

Curtain times are 8:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. for the matinee.

Saturday at 8:15 p.m. Langham Court Theatre will unveil another collaboration between the Victoria Theatre Guild and University of Victoria Theatre Division.

Strindberg's The Father, directed by Wandalie Henshaw and featuring John Krich, Patricia Wainman-Wood and Harriet Allen will run through Saturday, Feb. 7, including a performance Sunday evening, Feb. 1.

Creativity Of Drama Stressed

By AUDREY JOHNSON

One of the strange anomalies of our money-oriented society has been the downgrading, often to the point of total elimination, of creativity in education.

Any distinctly creative subject—or even approach to a subject—has been regarded by most Canadian educational authorities, parents and other taxpayers, as a "frill."

Pleasant, undoubtedly, but a waste of time and space in a "this - is-the-way-you-make-the buck" educational philosophy.

And yet on the other hand we are constantly told that the creative mind is at a premium—that golden opportunities await the original and inventive person.

At University of Victoria this weekend, a conference is being held whose theme is the encouragement of creativity in the schools systems.

MEANS TO END

Drama, not simply as an end to itself, but as a means for fostering and developing the natural creative functions of the young mind, is being considered, discussed and demonstrated in sessions which opened Friday morning and will conclude at noon Sunday.

Jointly sponsored by Uvic's Faculty of Education and Faculty of Fine Arts, it is being held in the Phoenix Theatre.

Participating are experts from mainland B.C., Alberta and the University of Washington.

Can Spring Thaw Find Happiness in New Bag?

By HERBERT WHITTAKER

TORONTO — Spring Thaw, that veteran champion of Canadian humor, is threatening to haul down the flag again. Despite some horrible warnings, the next edition of Spring Thaw is determined to be a New Bag.

During its long history, the topical revue which Mavor Moore started up in a basement of the Royal Ontario Museum in 1948, has claimed one distinction. It made fun of things Canadian.

The Jokes Shocked

To a people who had meekly accepted, as historical fact, that all its jokes would be second hand — second-hand English, second-hand French, second-hand United States — Spring Thaw came as a first-hand shock. Never mind if the jokes were often poor things, they were our own.

At first those jokes were local but eventually the rest of the country wanted to know what the Torontonians were sniggering at and to see the new stars who were making them snigger. Spring Thaw went national, even though it was difficult to find subjects that were funny "a mari usque ad mare." But as Canada embraced nationalism (when most older countries were discarding it) this became easier.

In fact, Spring Thaw's greatest success came in 1967, notably a Canada First year. Donald Harron singlehandedly wrote a show that was almost as big a success as Expo itself.

Last year, under the same management (but without Harron) Spring Thaw dropped its decades-old policy of topical humor — save for a few Old English revue routines. The result was bankruptcy.

The 1970 management of Howard Bateman and John Uren seems sharp and very much with it, as proclaimed by that new title: Spring Thaw 1970 is a New Bag. Is it sharp enough to capitalize again on the old show's one distinction — its Canadian topicality?

At first, it appeared that it would. The new Thaw was to have as finale a folk rock opera by Galt MacDermot who, since Hair, has become Canada's answer to Beethoven.

Also, contributions were being solicited from such other Maple Leaf brand talents as Joni Mitchell, Gordon Lighfoot, Ian and Sylvia, Carmen Lombardo, Leonard Cohen, Oscar Peterson, Ronnie Hawkins, Paul Anka, Robert Charlebois, Boris Brott, Peter Mann and the Sugar Shoppe.

JONI MITCHELL

OSCAR PETERSON

Furthermore, the working script is the work of Bateman, Norman Klenman, Lorne Michaels and Hart Pomeranz, Canadian writers all.

Bateman promises: "Toronto issues will make up half of the show. You'll have to live in Toronto to understand them. When we tour, we'll have to rewrite. Also, we plan daily changes to keep the show up-to-date."

On the other hand, four of the ten performers chosen by Moni Yakim to interpret this Canadian content are from the United States, while Israel-born director Yakim's background is Paris and the United States.

'No Principles'

"I understand that the producers are committed to the Canadian aspect of the show," shrugs Yakim, dashing, dark and positive. "It is a commitment from the past. At one time it was useful to the show, now . . . it is a commitment. I myself have no principles."

There will be Canadian content, adds Yakim, although without tremendous emphasis.

"It will concern things that concern Canadians. After all, Canadians are people. They respond to automation, for instance, the same as other people do. If I say something about the Establishment, it may not be exactly their Establishment, but they will understand."

But that Galt MacDermot folk rock opera, which helped Bateman and Uren sell the show across Canada, had to go. Yakim didn't care for it.

"We have asked MacDermot to write a new finale for the show. That folk opera idea didn't work — I couldn't work with it. Somebody else in New York — not MacDermot — had written the lyrics."

Yakim insists that he will have a big say in the show's material, in the concept if not the actual words, especially in its second half.

How has it come about that this 34-year-old Israeli, best known as a mime and action director, has earned the deciding vote in Canada's annual name-calling extravaganza? Largely he has done it through his work on Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris, which played at the same theatre, the Playhouse on Bayview, where Spring Thaw opens Feb. 16.

Yakim created that show. There was no Jacques Brel before he did it, except the original Belgian composer-singer. Out of the 30 Brel songs, Yakim built a whole show, with different singers expressing different aspects of the Brel personality. The success of Jacques Brel in Alive and Well in New York just over two years ago led to many editions, all of which Yakim staged, including the Toronto version.

Since then, Yakim has worked with two other talented Canadians, for he staged the movement of the Stratford Conn. production of Henry V last summer, which starred Len Cariou and Roberta Maxwell.

Yakim came by his gift for moving people on stage honestly. He started as a child actor in Israel, then went to Paris to study mime.

A Dilemma

It is not surprising that Moni Yakim does not see Spring Thaw 70 as part of a 23-year succession of Candian topical renues. How could he and still feel that he could do justice to its particular tradition? Yakim is determined to create something unique and hightly original for the theatre, something that will be appreciated in New York after it has been created here.

Which means Bateman and Uren have something very like a dilemma. Spring Thaw's proved a success when it has remained Canadian. The money for it was raised on this premise.

How can they make the new Spring Thaw 70 a new bag, original, highly creative and still keep it Canadian? All you can do now is remind them that the terms are not mutually exclusive, and to pray for them.

Big Pictures, Strong Sensations

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

Large pictures, dealing with strong sensations, seem to have impressed Vancouver collector J. Ronald Longstaffe. His collection is in town now at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, and will be there until February 8.

A work like Jack Bush's "Beige Painting" (it looks like a big sail) differs from the rest of the collection in one important respect While being very much characteristic of the abstract painting of the sixties. it is relaxed and easy in its execution.

Some of the edges of his flat forms go soft and uneven and certain planes have a soft, washy, almost stained effect quite unlike the precise, even flatness which has seemed so necessary to most contemporary "hard-edge" artists.

Bush is a Canadian, regarded as internationally important in the arts, and most of the other pictures in the collection are by contemporary Canadians, too. There are two exceptions to this however.

●

However "scientific" some may consider Albers' work to be, there is in this oil a kind of brushwork and a placement (of the colored squares) that is quite apart from the scientist's domain of measurement and repeatable demonstration.

The picture, like all good painting, has to be grasped, understood, with one's intuitive faculties. In that it can provide this kind of experience the Albers work escapes the tag of being "completely intellectual" which would usually serve to send a painting to its grave.

The other non-Canadian work in the collection is "Goyo - Ez," by Victor Vassarely. The title serves only to identify the painting. As there is so much "Op" art in the show, and as Vassarely is regarded as one of the top "Op" painters, the picture is worth some attention.

Rather than attempt another definition of "Op," or optical, art, I would urge you to see this picture, which may be one of the best and surely one of the subtlest works in this style yet available to us here in Victoria. It should be viewed for a few moments, at least, until some of its subtle interchanges, vibrations, and so on, take place for you.

"Op" effects of a different sort take place in the work of the Canadian Brian Fisher. He is concerned with the illusionary lines that seem to apear when precise sets of existing lines cross with a certain arrangement.

One would suspect that Fisher had spent years at engineering draftsmanship, but fascinated by the visual effects more than the engineering. The two works by him in this collection are fuller and more elaborate than anything shown in Victoria, recently, and one is multi-colored, which is quite a surprise.

The big blue Kiyooka painting is quite interesting. It treads dangerously close to something which might resemble a decorative panel for a cafeteria, or aquarium, and yet it sustains one's interest as an art object The four canvas panels containing the compressed ovals are executed with a remarkable precision and finesse.

There is a painted plaster bas-relief by Alfred Pellan, an important artist who we've seen too little of in recent Canadian shows. His work is more abstract than that of Miro or Picasso, with whom he associated for a while, yet it still definitely is in the surrealist category. The work here has a bright "folksy-primitive" kind of color, and the imagery is somewhere out of the solar system.

Lemieux's "Winter Moon" also makes a break with the rest of the show, and is worth more attention than it might seem to warrant at first glance. This very sparse work seems even a bit sentimental at first, but the more one sees of it the more one notices a sure, impressive handling of the paint and a subtle positioning and distribution of tones. The tilt of his horizon has a most interesting effect, as well as its soft handling. It seems a rather original piece.

Riopelle, the oldest of the moderns in the show, looks good here, in a very heavy but careful, deliberately painted work. It is the most "worked on" canvas here, a kind of cubist mosaic in primary colors which through attentive placement do not become dull or gaudy.

TURNED ON BY CABLE

Discussion of the score they are about to rehearse (above) leads off opening session of the band clinic being conducted at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary this weekend by famed Canadian composer-arranger-conductor Howard Cable.

The 120-piece band was specially picked and represented all junior and senior secondary schools in the area. Audience of 600 students and band instructors was able to follow score projected on screen at right.

'Melody Man' Plus Arranger Makes a Musical Hit

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

What exactly is an arranger?

There are people who think vaguely of an arranger as something of a hack music writer—a person who profits through the ability of others.

Not true. An arranger must be a highly skilled idea man, as essential to the success of a Broadway musical or a film as the designer. As valuable to the original composer as his right hand.

I asked the question, as a conversation opener, of the Canadian conductor who has most notably made his reputation as an arranger and composer of light music.

Howard Cable is opting out of the field to a great extent now—except that he has just completed the publication arrangment of the musical Promises, Promises, for a New York firm.

★ ★ ★

He is doing more original and meatier work now and has become involved more deeply in the educational field.

It is in the latter connection that he is in Victoria this weekend, conducting a clinic for several hundred band students of Greater Victoria secondary schools.

The Toronto-born musician, probably Canada's best known on the international level, recently succeeded Sir Ernest MacMillan as president of CAPAC (Canadian Authors and Publishers Association of Canada).

A slight, inensely vital man with humorous eyes and an inexhaustible eloquence, Cable answered my question and all that followed cheerfully and explicitly.

Question: As I understand it, to arrange and to orchestrate are one and the same thing?

Cable: That's right exactly. The melody the composer wrote you can play on the piano but you can't play it with an orchestra. So you take the melody and the chord progressions and you sort of reconstitute it—like orange juice.

You put it in a new garb . . . you add the frills.

Most songs as written by the composer are 32 bars long and take about 40 seconds to play. The most desirable length for one song is about 2½ minutes, therefore you have to play the chorus in two or three different ways.

So you see, there's a lot of original material in an arrangment.

All the great composers have made arrangements—they're called variations on a theme by whoever—Brahms did one on Haydn, Britten on Purcell, Rachmaninoff on Paganini. These are all arrangements.

Question: Are the composers of such musicals as My Fair Lady and Man of La Mancha (I know you worked on this one) able to do this sort of work themselves or are they really just melody men?

★ ★ ★

Cable: They really are melody men. They might have done it once. Many did it way back but as they became more successful—Well it's not a labor they undertake because they want to. Unless they're very very fussy about their material—like Aaron Copland.

Copland won't let anyone rescore his work. If he writes something for orchestra and it is transcribed for band, or vice versa, he does it himself.

Most Hollywood films are arranged by someone other than the composer. You get music by Henry Mancini with orchestrations by three or four people. But someone like Copland won't have anyone else do it. But then he's a composer, not a melody man.

Question: I would think the composer would want to do that part himself. Surely the development, the elaboration of the melody could be the most satisfying part?

Cable: Yes, I feel that way. But they don't. Perhaps their technique isn't highly developed enough.

★ ★ ★

Richard Rodgers is a good example of this kind of composer. He uses Robert Russell Bennett for all his orchestrations. Rodgers' shows would have been successful without Bennett no doubt, because the tunes are good. But they wouldn't have come out like they did.

I feel for instance that Bennett created Loewe's My Fair Lady. Bennett has this tremendous genius for setting—which isn't just a craft but an art by itself.

The overture to My Fair Lady is pure RRB—the feeling of Edwardian England that is there is all Bennett.

The arranger is responsible for choosing the instrumentation. For instance in A Little Bit of Luck, it's the overlay of Salvation Army 1905 that makes it work and that's all Bennett.

Rodgers would sit with Hammerstein in the country, so I understand, and write the show. Then they'd turn the whole thing over to a veritable army of people—arrangers and so forth.

Even the piano score you buy off the stand for $1.05, is arranged. The composer's music is often scribbled on bits of paper, music dictation books — sketches in a sort of shorthand.

Question: When did the arranger for musical shows first appear? Sullivan, for example certainly didn't use one.

Cable: No, nor did Victor Herbert. I think the arranger came in somewhere in the twenties. Gershwin didn't write his own. He could orchestrate as you know but he learned the art later on. He didn't know how to orchestrate when he wrote his first Broadway show.

He studied orchestration when he was working on Rhapsody in Blue.

But then it was actually orchestrated by someone else — by Ferde Grofe to be exact, who wrote the Grand Canyon Suite.

★ ★ ★

Mancini used at one time to do arrangements for Universal Studios. Then he developed into composing his own film scores and after that he had arrangers arranging for him.

I try to write my own. I don't like to feel that they're ghost-written.

All my music is published in New York. There is no real Canadian publication. Canadian publication without American distribution is almost impossible.

★ ★ ★

Cable: I don't think so. I don't think it's improving really. We are overwhelmed by the Americans in almost everything we do. And a lot of our good people, of course, are leaving to go to the States because there isn't enough to keep them here.

Our performing arts curve is very wavy. We hit a peak in 1967. Subsidies came along, centennial year came along, everything was rolling.

Then all of a sudden the subsidies were cut back, the box office fell off and everything was in a low state.

It will come back up again, but in the low period a lot of people clear out.

CBC has pretty well phased out all its musical shows and with them go the people who do them.

Some of us stay here. I came back from New York because I much prefer to live in Canada and I'll find things to do. But if I was keen on the big dollar I'd stay in the States.

★ ★ ★

The business of Canadian music on programs, live and radio, is going to have to be nudged. Canada Council is doing something. (Grants to symphonies this year will be to some extent conditional on their programming of Canadian music).

The radio stations won't play Canadian music until they're pushed into it.

Chauvinism on the one hand and on the other the doctrine of "if it's Canadian it can't be any good." It sort of puts the artist in a squeeze right in the middle.

★ ★ ★

Question: Have you done many of this type of clinic you are doing here?

Cable: Not too many and I would like to do more and probably will in the future. I've just been doing it and a bit of adjudicating for the last five years.

I've never had it so good as on this occasion, though. Entirely on my own and not having to be squeezed and hurried because of a tight schedule.

Question: What do you think about music festivals — Do they perform a useful function?

★ ★ ★

Cable: Well, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays I think they do and on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays I don't think they do.

I think that working for something is better than not working for something. Most people benefit from setting their work program to a goal.

Like examinations — should you abolish exams and give the kids nothing to work for? I think people need this long-term direction. I think getting ready for a festival is a first class element in their development.

Unfortunately the problem of mothers enters into it — and the problem of competition and the psychological damage it can do. I think it tears some kids apart.

Adults can opt out. But kids are told by mother or teacher — "you go into the festival." And it's also frequently indicated that they're expected to win.

Heavy Profit-Taking Erases Most of Gains

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Heavy profit-taking in two sessions on Canadian stock markets this week erased most of the gains made last week.

An oil strike in the Northwest Territories by Imperial Oil announced Jan. 15 sent prices soaring that session and the next.

However, profit-taking sliced away most of those gains Monday. The market advanced steadily for the next three sessions before profits were cut again Friday.

Part of Friday's losses were blamed on President Nixon's State of the Union address Thursday.

Observers said investors, who eye the United States economy as carefully as the Canadian situation, seemed confused by Nixon's statements that he would reduce federal spending while, at the same time, spend $10,000,000,000 for pollution control and double spending for law enforcement.

OILS ACTIVE AGAIN

This week, as last, stocks of companies with interests in the Arctic, and particularly around Imperial's Mackenzie delta find, were the most actively traded.

Imperial said Monday that the oil found at its Atkinson Point well in the delta was medium-gravity sweet cruide, or with a low sulphur content.

Sweet oil is also desirable because of concern over the contribution that sulphurous gases make to air pollution.

Drilling and coring at the well have been suspended to permit the well to be cased and to enable logs to be run to gain more information about the thickness and other characteristics of the rock strata.

However, Imperial made no reference to the volume of oil found.

REPORTED JADE FIND NEWS TO MINISTER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mines Minister Frank Richter of B.C. said Friday a reported jade find in northern B.C. valued at between $400,000 and $20,000,000 is news to him.

Mr. Richter said he had no knowledge of the find, about 100 miles northeast of Smithers, in the province's central Interior.

The find was disclosed Friday in a Toronto press conference by Dr. Glen Kong, 40, of Vancouver, and three associates who are developing the site to make jade jewelry.

Richter said there have been numerous jade finds in the province in recent years.

"A lot has been harvested and shipped to Europe and the Orient, but it's not too revenue-producing for the province," he said.

STEEL GIANTS GET GREEN LIGHT

BRUSSELS (WP) — The European Common Market's executive commission this week gave two German steel giants, Thyssen and Mannesmann, the go-ahead for a concentration program, including the creation of a new company.

At the same time, the European commission fined 25 West German steel companies a total of $189,000 for infringing the market's anti-trust regulations.

Common Market rules of competition authorize the commission to adjudicate on both "abuses of a dominant position on the market" and price-fixing and market-sharing agreements, though it cannot prevent the mere formation of a monopoly.

August Thyssen-Hutte and Mannesmann will set up a new company, Mannesmanrohren-Werke, to regroup their pipe construction operations.

Thyssen will take over Mannesmann's entire rolled steel production, as well as one third of Mannesmann's shareholding in pipe construction companies. Mannesmann will acquire two-thirds of Thyssen's shareholding the same sector.

MAIN OBJECT

The main aim of the rationalization agreement is to allow Thyssen to reinforce its position in the market for rolled steel, which Mannesmann will cease to produce. Mannesmann will concentrate on supplying the new company with material for pipes.

Although Thyssen and Mannesmann together have a 25-per-cent share of the European economic community market and 50 per cent of the West German market for pipes, commission officials decided that the new plans did not constitute an abuse of a dominant position.

The commission allowed the concentration program to go through on condition that board members of the two companies do not participate in the administration of any other steel company and that Thyssen withdraws from "WEST," a German joint selling agency.

Nixon's Message Proves No Help to Stock Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — President Nixon's long-awaited State of the Union address proved no help to stock prices this week and the market fell.

The 10.56 drop in the Dow Jones industrial average Friday to 775.54 was the sharpest nose-dive of the new year and pushed it to a loss of 7.06 on the week.

There was a modest and continued rally Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, but investors remained hesitant in the face of economic uncertainty, and the market "fell of its own weight," said one analyst.

The decline was an "instant analysis" of the president's speech, said Shearson, Hammil and Co. "Investors apparently found nothing there of great significance to the market."

Analysts had widely attributed the early rally to anticipation of good news in Nixon's address and to a rebound of "high-flying" glamor stocks that had suffered recent losses.

DECLINES IN LEAD

The decline for the week was wide ranging. Stocks that dropped in price on the New York Exchange overwhelmed advances 1,018 to 566 among the 1,738 issues traded.

There were 232 new lows for the 1969-70 year and only 36 new highs.

Individual corporate developments were prominent in market news.

The biggest was the announcement by American Telephone and Telegraph Co. that it planned a massive $1,570,000,000 financing program through offering shareholders 30-year debentures with stock purchase rights.

Trading was halted for one day to give investors time to evaluate the plan. The next day A.T. and T. lost ground but on Friday recouped some of its losses to end the week only ⅜ off the price of 49 at which it traded before the plan was announced.

Telex was a big winner, gaining 24¼ on the week despite a solid loss in the last day's trading. The New York Stock Exchange said it has imposed a 100-per-cent margin requirement on the stock effective Monday.

Weekly volume on the Big Board was about the same as the previous week at 52,508,900.

As the Dow declined, so did the broader-based indices.

The AP 60-stock average lost 3.8 to 266.2. Standard and Poor's 500-stock index dropped 1.85 to 89.07, and the New York Stock Exchange Index of some 1,200 common stocks fell 1.01 to 49.43.

The five most-active Big Board Stocks were:

Polaroid on 734,000 shares, down 13 to 105¾; Telex, up 24¼ to 140⅝; Lum's Inc., down 3¾ to 10⅝; A.T. and T., down ⅜ to 48⅝; and Continental Telephone, up ⅛ to 21.

The five most-active American exchange stocks were:

Syntex, on 612,000 shares, down 9⅝ to 47⅞; Data Products, down 5 to 19; Astrodata, down 3⅛ to 14¾; Ecological Science, up ¼ to 23⅝; and Career Academy, down 4⅝ to 40⅛.

New Sound System Displayed

NEW YORK (CP) — A Canadian company came to New York this week to show a new sound system it said "could spark a revolution" in the stereophonic industry.

Electrohome Ltd., of Kitchener, Ont., demonstrated a "four-channel" system designed to produce concert-hall sound in the home living room.

The company chose to make its initial exposure of the system, unmatched by anything else mass-produced in the higher-fidelity sound industry, in the United States in an obvious drive to increase its share of the American market.

H. W. Main, executive vice-president, said in an interview that Canadian Electrohome dealers can be expected to explain the system in Canada.

Main told a press conference that Electrohome has a major share of the Canadian market. He said that the company, situated in a country of about 20,000,0000 people, expects that it will be able to report sales of $44,000,000 for 1969.

DID YOU GET THE MESSAGE?

When someone calls you, do you get the message? Not just the name and number, the actual words. The tone of voice behind them. The REAL message.

There are only two ways you can really know what your caller said and how. One is to answer every call yourself. The other is to let Record-O-Fone do it for you.

Record-O-Fone is the most advanced automatic telephone answering service system. It answers the phone in your voice, on the first ring, every time. And it records whatever your caller says, exactly the way he says it.

Record-O-Fone stays on the job day and night, it never misplaces a message, or misspells a name, or gets the words wrong. It never answers back, and it doesn't gossip, so your private business stays that way. You, and only you, can get the messages by telephone anytime, from anywhere.

There are six models, each tailored to a specific business or professional need. We'd like you to see one in action. Just write Security Electronic Systems, P.O. Box 1522, or call 384-7535 anytime.

YOUR TAXES . . .

. . . By I. H. ASPER

Silence, Haste Threaten Reform

The Commons committee on finance, charged with the heavy responsibility of holding hearings to determine the widsom of the government's tax reform proposals, will influence far more than tax reform.

On the quality of its work rests an evaluation of the effectiveness fo the Trudeau-style parliamentary system. The government has attempted to streamline parliament by assigning the work of in-depth analysis of government policy to all-party committees, rather than taking up the time of the whole house in debating complex and technical issues.

Of course the majority of any parlimentary committee will consist of government members and therein lies the test of the system's effectiveness. Will the committee's majority of government supporters simply act as a rubber stamp for cabinet policy, or will the members recognize that their obligation is not to political party but to the entire country?

If the former, then the finance committee hearings on Finance Minister Bensons's tax white paper will be mere window dressing, a barely camouflaged but vain attempt to convince back benchers that they have a meaningful role in shaping Canada, and Canadians, that participating democracy is a fact.

But if the committee approaches its task on the footing that it has a responsibility, regardless of partisan interests, to recommend the best possible tax system, then all members will bring to their work objectivity, open-mindedness and a desire to hear and consider the views of as many Canadians as want to participate.

Benson was the committee's first guest last week. From the quality and intensity of the questioning, it appears that the committee members have adopted a serious and responsible view of their function.

However, an otherwise auspicius beginning was marred by Chairman Gaston Clermont's sudden announcement a day or two before the hearings began that anyone who had not signified by last Monday his intention of filing a brief or apearing before the committee to register his views, would be excluded. The announcement also warned that anyone's brief that was not in the committee's hands by March 1, would not be considered.

These restrictions quite rightly brought a howl of protest from several organizations, including the Canadian Bar Association and Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. It is inconceivable that the government should seek to cut off debate in this fashion. It has taken the government almost eight years of research, not to mention millions of dollars, to formulate a tax reform plan and get it to the committees hearing stage.

Surely the interested public should be allowed more than two months to evaluate the proposals and articulate its views. There are literally dozens of organizations who haven't even had an opportunity to begin their own studies, let alone decide whether or not they wish to make representations.

TAKE MORE TIME

The parliamentary committee would do well to take more time itself in weighing the white paper proposals. There is now talk of having counsel and tax expert staff appointed to aid the committee. Indeed, this is essential if the hearings are to have any value. In fact, the committee ought to have had expert analysis before its encounter with Benson and his officials.

The white paper bases its case on a great many economic value judgments and assumptions which deserve intensive examination. Moreover, the proposals have far-reaching implications which are either glossed over or ignored in the paper itself. Even the professional tax authorities in the private sector, who have done little else since November 7 but study the white paper, haven't completed the task of digging up the full implications of the new plan.

The committee would do well to have independent research. It should make its own independent comparison of the true effective tax rates with those in the United States. It should determine who will really pay the capital gains tax — the wealthy or the middle class. The latter comparison may cast serious doubt on the government view that this tax is borne by the top income group.

Finance officials should be closely examined on the potentiality of retroactively taxing already built up capital gains: on the possibility that under certain circumstances life insurance proceeds will be taxed as ordinary income; on the effect of levying higher taxes where people have previously entered into long term financial commitments, relying on the continuity of the present tax system.

There are literally dozens of equally important implications which do not become apparent without in-depth digging and sifting.

APATHY

One of the most disturbing aspects of public reaction so far has been its apathy and lethargy.

Across Canada, discussions amongst those adversely affected, particularly small businessmen, farmers, industrial developers and entrepreneurs are characterized by observations such as "What can I do? I'm just one man; my writing a letter won't change the government's mind."

Nothing could be more inaccurate. Benson, to his credit, is quite serious when he says he's flexible and will change the plan if anyone can show undue hardship. However, government is entitled to assume that silence from affected groups means acceptance of the proposals.

Clearly then the two enemies of good tax reform are silence on the part of individuals, and haste on the part of the parliamentary committee.

AT & T Warrants Jolt Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — You couldn' tell from the action in the stock, but American Telephone really shook up Wall Street when it announced plans for a $1.57 billion bond offering to is shareholders.

The size of the sale might be enough, but the fact that Telephone's package includes warrants to buy more shares has a couple of sections of the business world running around in circles.

Basically, a warrant is an option to buy a stock at a reduced price. The holder of the warrant can turn it in to the company, along with the specified amount of money, and get a share of stock. In Telephone's case, every $100 worth of bonds will include warrants to buy two shares.

NO EQUITY

Warrants have no equity in the company, they receive no dividends, they have no voting power. The company's only obligation is to issue a share of stock when the warrant and the money are presented. While many warrants have no time limitation, the Telephone warrants can be exercised any time between six months and five years from the day they are issued.

Warrants are usually used as "sweeteners" in a financing deal. A couple of years ago, they were very popular with conglomerate-builders, who issued them as currency to attract shareholders of target companies.

Dut they have usually been frowned upon by larger companies, who saw warrants as a gimmick unworthy of use by any respectable organization.

EAT ITS WORDS

The same attitude has prevailed at the New York Stock Exchange. The Big Board has not permited warrants among its listings for about 50 years. In that time, here have been periodic outbursts at the practice of listing warrants.

The NYSE is about to eat its words. No sooner was the Telephone financing plan announced than the exchange's staff began work on plans to permit trading in warrants—or at least "high-grade" warrants.

The exchange's action is interesting for a number of reasons. Currently, warrants issued by Big Board-listed firms often trade on the American Stock Exchange. There are 45 warrants there, issued by 43 corporations including Ling-Temco-Vought, Braniff Airways, Atlantic-Richfield, Gulf and Western Industries and Hilton Hotels. The AMEX has never been very uppity about the company it keeps.

As far as NYSE members are concerned, it makes little difference which exchange lists the warrants. Any Big Board member which does not own a membership on the AMEX has a working arrangement with another broker which gives him access to the small board's floor. There are a few who keep more of the commission dollars on NYSE trading, but that does not include any of the larger firms.

So, to a great extent, the NYSE's anxiety is a matter of pride and prestige. What does the exchange say to its members if the Telephone warrants are listed on the AMEX and then trade substantially more heavily than the common shares on the NYSE?

West Coast Clubs Enjoy Some Relief

Bill WALKER

The lacrosse people are already playing games although the first ball won't be centred for a few months yet.

A reorganization of the Shamrocks is afoot with nobody wanting any part of a season such as last year, marked by dispute, disagreement, and last place.

From various sources, most of them official, it has been ascertained that:

There will be a new president;

There will be a new manager:

There will be a new coach;

There will be a new and enlarged board of directors;

There will be a better effort from within the organization;

There will be a new deal with the British Columbia Lacrosse Association.

Thus there is no substance to reports that the game's first family is about to shrivel and up and vanish from the scene.

"I'll admit," said retiring club president Keith Dorman, "there was less than normal co-operation from a lot of people last year . . . that some mistakes were made . . . that personalities were involved . . . and that there were personal frictions within the club."

And why should he not say it, because it was known and deplored in some circles, that certain players, who could have played, watched from the stands rather than get involved.

However, this is what the reorganization is all about.

"I feel I should step down," Dorman added. "This is positive; the position should be moved around.

"Certain key people have been asked to come with us, people whom we feel are necessary to the success of the Shamrock club, and in that regard we propose to boost the directorate to about a dozen people. This will represent new blood, and this, I feel, is what the club needs."

●

That was the official statement, and meetings have already been held on the subject with the players airing their views and expressing their faith in the future.

All of which is good, and the first to admit that lacrosse may flourish again because of it is ex-coach Tommy Druce.

"No, I won't be back," Druce said. "I have no regrets about last year. Some players sat out, and that hurt us. And there was friction. Why deny it?"

"And I do feel that the only way the Shamrocks can save it all is for everyone to work for the same cause. That is the only way."

He probably could have been rude and said much more, for it was his coaching record that was tarnished as much as the Shamrock image by last year's lack of effort.

Because Druce did have a background that would stand probing. He had been a Shamrock himself, and there were few who cared to test his right to be called the club "policeman." And he could run, for a big man, and his spirit was never questioned.

He also displayed a talent for handling players, if they cared to use their ability, when he coached the junior Shamrocks to a Minto Cup triumph in 1961, a Canadian final which was lost in seven games in 1962, and a B.C. final in 1963.

●

But the coach bears the brunt of losing. That didn't bother Druce. What upset him more, probably because he was one of the purists from the old school, was the attitude of the players that came with the advent of what mistakenly was labelled "Professional Lacrosse."

He scored the "we are pros — we want our money, not promises — or we won't play" stand that some of the players took.

"I asked them where they thought it was coming from," said Tom. He didn't disclose the answers.

And that apparently marked the beginning and the end of that form of bargaining, because Druce never was about to mollycoddle anyone, particularly a malcontent lacrosse player.

Another voice from the Shamrock past, that will be missing, and may be sorely missed, is that of Hec McNeill, 10 years a director and eight years a manager.

"I'm going to take off at least a year," he said. "My position demands it, and besides, I've got a boat now."

Of the immediate past, he said:

"I think when the team went big-time, like professional, we left out the workers, the little fellows who took their turn at the wheel and made the Shamrocks what they were in the first place. And maybe the changes will help bring it back. I think that is the answer.

"Players, we have lots of them," he added. "But what we really forgot to do was to work together."

And so; the key to the Shamrock future is organization and contribution. The other details, as some sort of player agreement with Nanaimo, and a new deal with the B.C. body can come later, and likely will.

The club meets again next week. It is to be hoped that discussion will be calculated to please.

Canadiens Trade Duff to Kings; Seals Connect

Times News Services

The struggling National Hockey League teams are situated on the West Coast, and that's where the help went Friday.

Los Angeles Kings, mired deep in the Eastern Division basement, drew help from Montreal Canadiens. Oakland, only a step ahead of the Kings, helped themselves.

The Seals did it by belting Toronto Maple Leafs 6-3 in Friday's only on-ice activity.

Off the ice, the action — and winger Dick Duff — went from Montreal to Los Angeles. The Kings obtained the 34-year-old winger from Canadiens in exchange for a player to be named at a later date.

HAS BEEN IDLE

Duff had not played with the Montreal club since Dec. 31. He missed a New Year's Day practice and had been benched by coach Claude Ruel since that time.

Earlier this season Duff told the Canadiens' management he intended to retire. However, after minor surgery, he returned to the club, played in 17 games and managed only one goal and one assist.

The Seals, who finished a strong second last season, climbed back into contention for a playoff spot by beating the Leafs behind Earl Ingarfield's three-goal performance. They now have 30 points, one behind the fourth-place Pittsburgh Penguins.

GOING GREAT

The Seals, who have lost only once in their last five games, took a 2-0 first-period lead on a pair of power-play goals by Ingarfield and defenceman Doug Roberts in an unusual double penalty situation.

Toronto's Jim Harrison was given a double penalty for charging Oakland's Carol Vadnais. At the time the Leafs were already shorthanded.

In the second period, however, the Leafs tied it on goals by Jim McKenney and Bob Pulford.

About midway through the period, Roberts was given a five-minute major penalty when he high-sticked and injured Leaf wing Floyd Smith.

20TH FOR ELLIS

Ingarfield and defenceman Harry Howell added two more goals later in the second period. Ingarfield, again, and defenceman Dick Mattiussi got two more in the third.

Ron Ellis scored the final goal of the game for Toronto in the third period — his 20th of the season.

Five games are set for tonight with a full slate of six contests Sunday.

Boston Bruins will make a run at first place without the services of three forwards. Ken Hodge is out of the lineup with a badly-bruised left knee. Wayne Carleton and Wayne Cashman both are suffering from a virus.

The Bruins Friday called up Frank Spring from Oklahoma City Blazers of the Central League and Don Marcotte from Hershey Bears of the American League as emergency replacements.

GAR TAYLOR RE-ELECTED AS PRESIDENT

Gar Taylor was re-elected to a two-year term as president during the annual meeting of the Greater Victoria Sports Council at McPherson Lounge.

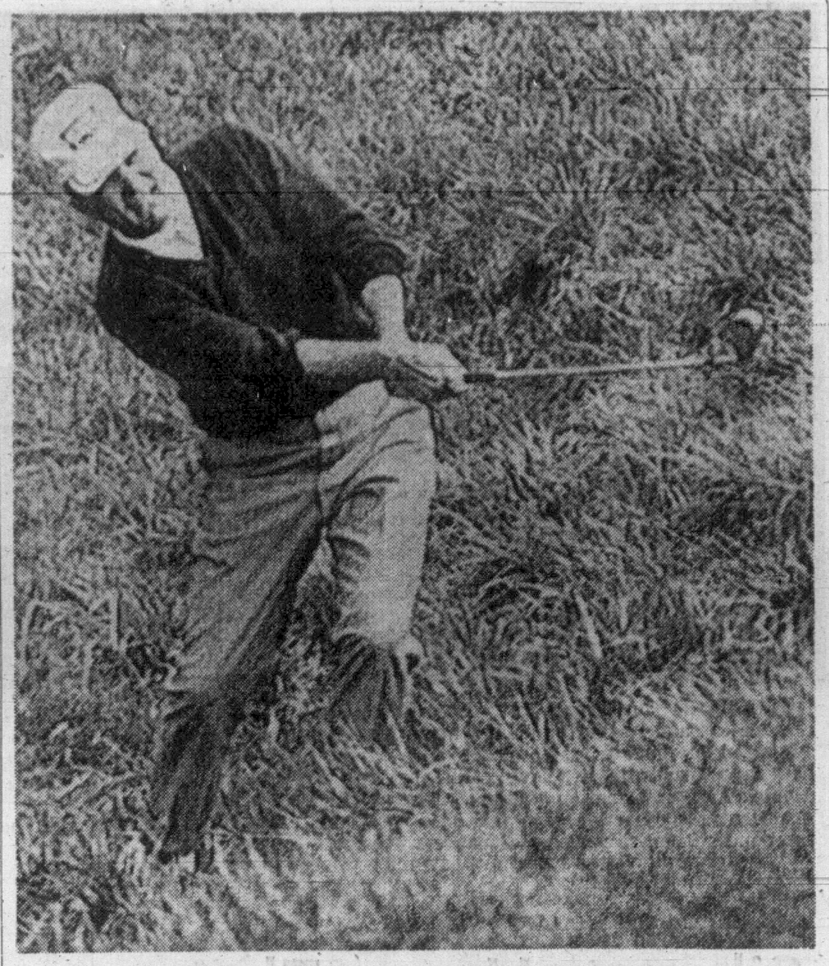
Ken Sturrock was elected to a two-year term as director while secretary-treasurer Ted McConnan and director Al Beasley were returned for two-year terms.

Continuing on the directorate for the coming year are Cliff Bate, Bert Richman, John Oster and Gary Taylor.

Now preparing a sports calendar for 1970, the council heard a request from minor soccer representative Peter Bishop for coaching assistance. Coaching candidates are asked to call Bishop at 382-8958.

Australians Slump

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (Reuters) — South Africa clamped a stranglehold on the first cricket test Friday as Australia slumped to 108 for six in reply to the South African first innings total of 382.



ROUGH TIME FOR ROBERT

Troubles were plentiful Friday at Pebble Beach as gales buffeted golfers in annual Bing Crosby pro-amateur tournament. Finding one of tough spots was Bob Goalby, who hits shot from deep rough on 17th hole. He took bogie on this hole but finished with par 72 for two-day total of 139, two strokes off Bert Yancey's pace. (AP Wirephoto)

Yancey Claims Honors In Wind-Whipped Test

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Even the ducks were looking for shelter.

But not the golfers, who played through whipping wind, and cold and the ocean spray.

Bert Yancey proved most able to handle conditions and shot a wind-blown 70 Friday and took over first place in the $125,000 Bing Crosby pro-am with a 36-hole total of 137.

He held a two-stroke lead over Jim Wiechers and former Masters champion Bob Goalby, each at 139. Wiechers had a second round 71 and Goalby a 72.

Three Monterey Peninsula courses are being used for the first three rounds, Spyglass, Pebble Beach and Cypress Point. All carry par 72s.

KNUDSON SLIPS

But he was in good company there with Miller Barber, Paul Harney, Bruce Devlin, Arnold Palmer and George Archer.

The only other Canadian in the field, Al Balding of Toronto, was much deeper in the pack at 147 after rounds of 72 and 75.

Only two pros in the field of 168 broke 70 in Friday's cold and gale-force winds. Some scores went out of sight. Ron Cerrudo, one of the first round leaders, went to a 76. Bob Murphy, who had an opening 67, took a 78. Frank Beard, last year's leading money winner, had an 81. Hugh Royer went from a 68 to 82.

NICKLAUS CLOSE

Tied for the lead in the pro-am standings are Don Bies with amateur partner Richard Snideman of Pebble Beach and pro Bob Rosburg with his partner, San Francisco 49er quarterback John Brodie. Each team is at 124.

Knudson and his amateur partner, Barry Van Gerbig, were third in the team standings at 126. The pair was tied with pro Bobby Mitchell and amateur Carling Dinkler.

AGING BUT STILL ABLE, GONZALES STUNS LAVER

NEW YORK (AP)—Pancho Gonzales, the grand old man of professional tennis, shot from behind to upend Rod Laver, Australia's 1969 grand slam king, 7-5, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2 Friday night in a $10,000 winner-take-all match at Madison Square Garden.

Battling exhaustion and stomach cramps in the final set as well as his gifted, younger opponent, the 41-year-old Gonzales kicked off the Tennis Champions' Inc. tour for $200,000 in prize money with a stunning upset.

A partisan crowd of 14,761 roared encouragement through the deciding fifth set as Gonzales, gulping salt and aspirin tablets during breaks in the action, twice broke Laver's service in a string of five winning games that carried him past the Aussie ace.

Island Seniors Start in Style

Vancouver Island performers were tossing stones in impressive style as the Pacific Coast Curling Association's senior men's playoff started Friday night at Victoria Curling Club.

Islanders won three of the four first-round contests of the eight-rink, double-loss elimination playoff that winds up Sunday.

In that one, Gutoski flashed some of the shotmaking skill that carried him to the provincial men's crown in 1958 and rolled to a 10-4 triumph.

SPOTTISWOOD WINS

Harry Spottiswood of Port Alberni, Nanaimo's Don McRae and Mert Ballard of Vancouver's Arbutus club also chalked up first-draw wins.

Spottiswood nudged Chilliwack's Ted Berrth 6-4, McRae rolled past Herb Palo of Vancouver McPherson Winter Club 8-5 and Ballard posted an 8-6 triumph over New Westminster rival Lyle Reichert.

Play continued today with three draws, the last one starting at 8:30 p.m., and is slated to wind up with the final draw at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. If an extra round is required, it will be played Sunday at 2 p.m.

Firing some accurate shots to keep his rink out of deep trouble on the early ends, Gutoski jumped into a solid 5-2 lead by scoring three on the fourth end and was in command the rest of the way.

Spottiswood, holding a 2-1 lead after two ends, may have averted defeat for his Nanaimo crew when he saved a possible four or five-ender on the third end. He made a difficult shot on outside ice to get second rock and hold Berrith to one counter.

Palo moved within one shot of McRae, at 6-5, on the eighth end, but the Nanimo skip, who had missed some chances to establish a comfortable lead, lowered the boom on the ninth. McRae made his last stone good for two counters and started home with a three-shot lead.

Hall (PA)	101 010 100 x— 4
Spottiswood (PA)	020 301 020 x— 8

SEATTLE MAYOR BATTLING . . . . . . TO KEEP BALL FRANCHISE

Court Last Resort for Pilots

SEATTLE (AP) — Mayor Wes Uhlman, in a last-ditch move to keep Seattle Pilots in this city, asked a state court Friday for a restraining order prohibiting the removal of the franchise.

Superior Court Judge F. A. Walterskirchen issued an order that Pacific Northwest Sports Inc., owner of the Pilots, show cause at a hearing next Thursday why such an injunction should not be issued.

Uhlman asked that the corporation be enjoined from selling stock or players and from seeking American League sanction for transfer of the franchise.

Uhlman also asked that the team be ordered to honor its agreement to play in Seattle's Sicks Stadium until a new domed stadium is completed in 1973.

Uhlman had said earlier he would file an antitrust suit against the team owners and the American League in an attempt to retain for Seattle the team that played here only one season.

That action has been drawn up, the mayor's office said, but has not been filed.

American League owners are scheduled to meet in Oakland, Calif., next Tuesday to consider the financial plight of the Pilots and requests from Milwaukee and Dallas-Fort Worth that the team be moved to those cities.

Uhlman said he would attend the meeting of American League owners to present Seattle's case.

Blanked Broncs Tackle Cougars

Penticton Broncos threw everything but the kitchen sink at Vancouver Centennials on Friday, and don't blame Victoria Cougars for wishing the Okanagan team has spent all its ammunition.

The Cougars are next, meeting Jack Taggart's Broncos in a British Columbia Junior Hockey League argument tonight at Memorial Arena, starting 8:30.

Returning to the Cougars' lineup tonight will be winger Lonnie Miles. The winger missed three games because of a shoulder injury but was given the green light after Friday night's practice.

Centennials finally backed up his efforts at 15:50 of the third period with a goal by Ray Todd, who deflected Bob Salo's shot while Penticton was a man short.

Todd also was credited with the second Vancouver goal at 19:16 of the final frame.

The victory stretched Vancouver's undefeated streak to seven games and moved them into sole possession of second place, one point behind league-leading Victoria.

Lions Sign Quarterback

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference have announced the signing of quarterback Vidal Carlin.

Carlin, 24, is six-foot-three and weighs 195 pounds. He became a free agent last season after being with the Atlanta Falcons.

He was a third-round draft choice by St. Louis Cardinals in 1967 and was used as a back-up quaterback.

Carlin was a junior all-American at North Texas State University.

TICKET TOP OF $6.50 FOR VANCOUVER GAMES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver hockey fans will pay $6.50, $5 or $3.50 a ticket to see the Canucks play in the National Hockey League next season if the club's board of directors accepts a recommendation put forward by Medicor vice-president Lyman Walters.

Walters' three-price scale places 6,390 seats in the $6.50 bracket. Another 6,130 seats are priced at $5 and the remaining 2,494 at $3.50. There are four price ranges for current Western Hockey League games—$4, $3.50, $3 and $2.50.

The Medicor people, new owners of the hockey club, anticipate they will draw approximately 80 per cent of capacity, which would mean a gross gate for the season of roughly $2,500,000.

Canucks Happiest On Home Ground

By The Canadian Press

League-leading Vancouver Canucks Friday night hammered Seattle Totems 3-0 to increase their margin over second-place Portland Buckaroos to 21 points at the top of the Western Hockey League standings.

The Buckaroos, in the only other WHL game played Friday, sank 6-5 to cellar-dwellers Salt Lake City in Salt Lake.

In Vancouver, the Canucks broke a WHL record for consecutive home victories, marking their 16th straight win at home. The previous record was 1, set by Denved Invaders in 1963-64.

Ted Taylor and Paul Andrea scored for Vancouver in the first period and Ted McCaskill added the only goal in the second period. There was no scoring in the final stanza.

In Salt Lake, Bob Heaney, who scored the winning goal in the Eagles' 5-4 decision over the Buckaroos Wednesday night, did it again Friday night when he scored with five minutes left.

Most of the action came in the first period, with seven goals scored and Salt Lake coming out on top 4-3.

Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott

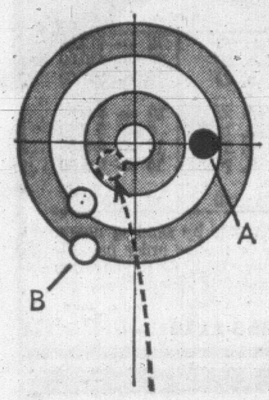
(Three-time World Champion)

In today's situation, blacks are two up without last rock in the eighth end as their skip prepares to deliver his last stone.

He can play a hit on "B" and hope to double out both white rocks, or he can play an out-turn draw so that he has two counters.

THE STRATEGY: I would play the out-turn draw for two reasons. First of all, it is the easiest way to be sure of holding your opponent to one point. Secondly, it would give you a great possibility of stealing a point.

The trouble with playing the double is that if you are not successful, your opponent will have an easy shot for two and two points here seem extremely big.



★ ★ ★

TODAY'S TIP: When playing on swingy, heavy ice, and you have gained a lead, don't throw your rocks through the house. They are far better in the house.

Hitting on keen, straight ice is not always a cinch, and on heavy, swingy ice it is a difficult task.

However, don't stop your rocks short as your opponent will likely go behind regardless of what the score might be. On this swingy, heavy ice it is always best to try to force your opposition into hitting.

You should never try a freeze or a quiet tap back. This type of shot is rarely made on this kind of ice.

In short, play it as simple as possible, either a straight draw to the house, or a wide-open hit.

ENGLISH SOCCER FANS NOT HAPPY . . . . . . CUP TEAM HASN'T JELLED

'As Nippy as a Three-Legged Hippopotamus'

By JAMES CONWAY

LONDON (CP) — Cheers have turned to boos and hopes to ashes as English soccer fans gloomily watch the national squad's unsteady progress towards its defence of the quadrennial World Cup this June.

The roaring crowds that shook Wembley with chants of ecstasy when England captured the cup for the first time four years ago roared again when the rebuilt squad fought a muddled scoreless draw against a low-ranked Netherlands team—this time expressing their derision.

Equally biting were the comments from sports writers who could hardly believe the team was selected by manager Sir Alf Ramsey, who was knighted for his success in the 1966 competition.

Peter Wilson of The Daily Mirror said the team seemed "as though it had been made up of the parts from two different jigsaw sets which never looked like interlocking."

Despite the desperate mid-match substitution of two players, Wilson said the team ultimately resembled "a troupe of ninth-rate amateur actors suddenly caught anguished in the spotlights of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, with their parts completely forgotten and looking desperately to some prompter in the wings to tell them what to do."

★ ★ ★

In The Evening Standard, J. L. Manning said the English squad looked about as nippy "as a three-legged hippopotamus."

Prospects for the cup competition could hardly look blacker. The stalemate at Wembley closely followed the draw in Mexico City which paced England in the toughest of the four four-team groupings.

Both Czechoslovakia and Romania in the same group are expected to provide stiff opposition, but the hardest fight is predicted from Brazil, twice holder of the prized trophy.

Unless England can grab either first or second place in its group, fans will have to wave goodbye to the cup for at least four years.

There is likely to be a lot of head-scratching at British football headquarters during the next few weeks.

On the face of it, England's record is not bad. Its strong defence has let in only three goals in six games and the team can claim it hasn't lost any of its last 13 matches, but the fumbling forward line just doesn't seem to be able to score the goals that count.

They netted only five in six matches.

Despite almost-feverish tinkering with the lineup—for The Netherlands' game Ramsey made seven changes in the team that beat Portugal in December—he has yet to find a cure for what commentators are calling the "goal famine."

FOR FUN AND FUNDS

Schmockey Makes Debut on Monday

Politicians "on ice" and a broomball game featuring football players from B.C. Lions will be among the highlights of Victoria's first "Schmockey Night" in Memorial Arena on Monday.

Mainly, it's a collection of mock hockey contests for fun and funds, with 15 events scheduled on the 2½-hour program, which starts at 8 p.m.

Political stickhandling of a different sort than is making headlines at the legislature these days will highlight the "night" sponsored by Kinsmen in aid of their annual Mother's March drive which starts on Feb. 2.

A team of MLAs will meet an equally inept group of press-radio representatives in the climax event — a "schmockey" game.

Listed on the politico lineup are Leslie Peterson, Ray Williston, Herb Capozzi, Evan Wolfe, Dennis Cocke, Willis Jeffcoat, Harold Meriless, Dave Brousson, John Tisdalle and Burt Campbell.

Formidable players on the press-radio squad include Gorde Hunter, Barry Bowman, Doug Taylor, Fraser McAlpine, Chuck Mudrak, Lorne Cunningham, Keith McCallion, Ralph Warrington and Vince Cownden.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford will coach the politicians while Ida Clarkson has drawn the dubious distinction of guiding the "Media" squad.

CYCLINE TO SMATE

Place-kicking ace Ted Gerela will handle the B.C. Lions broomball team, which is scheduled to tackle the University of Victoria Vikings rugby squad on ice.

Other Leos who have vulunteered their services include Jerry Bradley, Len Sparks, Ken Phillips and Wayne Dennis.

Other highlights include the appearance on skates of Fred "Cyclone" Taylor, an 86-year-old Hockey Hall-of-Famer.

Brad Bishop and Debbie Ganson of Seattle, two members of the U.S. Olympic figure-skating team, will be on hand to demonstrate their skills along with Victoria's Paul Fisher, 1969 Canadian junior men's champion.

CHARIOT RACE

Students from local senior high schools are busy today with final preparations for a chariot race on ice that could be one of the night's most colorful events.

It all promises to add up to an interesing evening.

Penalties Disrupt Stockers

Penalties kept Stocker North Americans off balance most of the way Friday and helped Queen's Own Rifles to cruise to a 3-1 Vancouver Island Hockey League victory at the Sports Centre.

Unable to mount a sustained attack, Stockers also were stymied by the steady play of Rifles' netminder Joe Rozon. He conceded only a second-period goal to Dennis Ferrill, was in control the rest of the way.

Pete Okopski, George Ede and Gary Lauder scored for Rifles in the rugged contest. Stockers were tagged with seven minors, two majors and three misconducts. Rifles' assessment was four minors and two majors.

None of the penalties, however, figured in the scoring.

University of Victoria Vikings are unable to make headway, but they still can claim a slight advantage in a hectic scramble for the fourth and last playoff berth in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association's men's basketball league.

Alberta's Golden Bears, strengthening their hold on third place, handed Vikings their third straight loss Friday, 76-64. Calgary and Winnipeg, who shared fourth with Vikings, also failed to make headway.

Saskatchewan Huskies made it a four-way scramble by defeating Winnipeg's Wesmen 85-75 while the Dinosaurs bowed 87-60 to UBC Thunderbirds in Calgary.

Coach Bob Bell's Vikings have a game in hand over the other three teams sharing fourth place.

Skip Cronck was Vikings' best with 15 points but Tom Child and Mike Taafe, each with 10, also played strong two-way games.

WEEKEND'S TOP SHOWS

Tonight

MOVIE TO WATCH this evening is Becket, the Oscar-winning adaptation of Jean Anouilh's play about two figures of destiny in 12th-century England—Thomas Becket and King Henry II.

NHL HOCKEY, 5:00, Channels 2 and 6. The Chicago Black Hawks meet the Montreal Canadiens in Montreal. Danny Gallivan calls the play-by-play.

CBC WEEKEND, 7:15, Channels 2 and 6. Lloyd Robertson is the host and scheduled segments include Winnipeg's Smockey Night. This will be the last edition of Saturday Weekend. It is being cancelled and the 11 p.m. national news will be reinstated on the same basis as week-day editions.

ANDY WILLIAMS, 7:30, Channel 5. Tiny Tim pops up everywhere following his TV wedding. Tiny sings while the Williams Weirdos make fun of his style, plays with Andy's bear, and joins Charlie Callas, Jimmy Rodgers and Andy for a childhood memory segment. Deanna Lund of "Land of the Giants" appears in various blackouts, and The Lettermen and Jimmy Rodgers earn time for a solo or two.

SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, 9:00, Channel 5. "The Last Safari" (1967). Excellent African footage filmed in Kenya helps to bolster this safari yarn with Stewart Granger playing the old-hand guide, a variation of his role in "King Solomon's Mines." Kaz Garas, an interesting new face introduced here, is a he-man playboy-adventurer who comes to grips with Granger during an elephant hunt. The action sequences are well photographed too.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE, 9:30, Channel 4. Husband and wife night as Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme co-host the show. Steve and Eydie have big medleys to sing including a tribute to "Hair"; Roy Rogers and Dale Evans step up for a western duet; Steve Allen and Jayne Meadows play a couple celebrating a second honeymoon; the team of Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca invite the Allens over for a family argument on whether or not to play cards; and the show's male contingent complains musically about commuting.

MANNIX, 10:00, Channel 7. Moderately interesting murder case uses the flashback, a technique generally ignored on this series. Scenes of a man running into the ocean to save a lady are replayed often as various witnesses give slightly different versions of the event to the inquiring Mannix. Flashbacks are effective in the earlier scenes and help to bypass the domestic wrangles between a weary husband (Robert Lansing) and his rejected wife (Diane McBain).

•

Sunday

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is Hombre, the ABC Sunday night movie. (See listing below)

* * *

TOMMY HUNTER. 7, Channels 2 and 6. Selections include Mule Skinner Blues, Lumberjack Man, Amen Corner and Raise a Ruckus. The regular cast does the honors.

MY WORLD AND WELCOME TO IT. 7:30, Channels 2 and 6. John Monroe becomes uncomfortably aware of the lovely lady next door . . . she starts sashaying into his dreams with such gusto he can't be sure if they're really just dreams.

THE FABULOUS SIXTIES. 7:30, Channel 8. The spotlight is on 1964 tonight in the fith of 10 programs chronicling the decade just past. Hard news such as Canada's new flag, separatism and the U.S. election trail is covered . . . and it's tempered with lighter issues such as the emergence of The Beatles and topless dancers.

ED SULLIVAN. 8, channels 2, 6, 7, 12. Ed's varied guest list offers something for everyone. Pattie Page sings a medley of popular tunes; B. J. Thomas comes on for his hit, "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head"; Hines, Hines and Dad offer a song-and-dance routine; Jacques D'Amboise, brilliant member of the New York City Ballet, performs; Norm Crosby and Robert Klein do a comedy routine apiece; and those equilibrists called The Jovers provide the novelty number on the bill.

GLEN CAMPBELL GOODTIME HOUR. 9, channel 7. Ray Charles addes a little heat to the show, turning loose for "Eleanor Rigby," and returning at the end for the hour's best moments in a medley of his hits with host Glen Campbell. George Gobel does most of the talking here, recalling his triumphs as a guitarist, and seeking Campbell's help in removing a bowling ball from his thumb in a comedy sketch. Vocalist Gloria Loring rounds out Glen's guest list.

SUNDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9, channel 4. "Hombre." (1967). Paul Newman stars in this thoughtful, generally absorbing western, playing a white man raised by Indians. The plot begins to resemble the John Wayne classic "Stagecoach" when Newman boards a stage on which Fredric March and the rest of the principals are passengers, and there's a final shootout between the good guys (Newman and pals), and the outlaws. However, the screenplaying by Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank Jr. raises some interesting human and moral issues along the way.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE. 10, channels 7, 12. A clever new agent, a dog small enough to creep through air ducts, steals the show tonight. Cute Chico manages to retrieve a rare stamp containing a planted gadget emitting a sound only dogs can hear. In the climactic moments, Chico is trapped, due to electrical failure, and his worried expression will win instant sympathy. After all this time, it has taken a dog to inspire concern for Mission agents in a jam, and Chico does the trick in one take.

Linda Cristal's Thing Two Sons, Working

By HARVEY PACK

NEW YORK — The beautiful Victoria of NBC's "The High Chaparral" is a pleasure to interview. Linda Cristal has been through analysis and the once shy and withdrawn lady now opens up at the drop of a question and sometimes without one. Quite matter-of-factly over orange juice come lines like "I have a very healthy appetite. I love good food and sex but I don't believe in indulging myself too much."

* * *

Linda went into analysis when her marrage went bad and she found herself unable to get out of bed in the morning and face even the simplest chores. Now, the therapy completed, the marriage amicably dissolved, Miss Cristal dedicates herself to bringing up her two sons and acting.

"I made 30 movies and never considered it anything more than a job. Now I have studied and for the first time I understand it is more than looking pretty . . . so now I love it."

She was cast as Victoria when she threw away the audition script because she felt it did not permit her an opportunity to show sufficient range. A surprised producer, who probably did not expect much more than a lovely looker with an authentic Spanish accent, then did five improvisations and was signed on the spot. "I guess learning how to do an improvisation and get into a character was an extension of analysis," she admitted.

* * *

"My doctor used to assign me exercises which were similar to improvisational theatre. For example, because I thought people only accepted me because I have a pretty face he made me spend two weeks without any make-up, my hair improperly combed, wearing blue jeans and sandals so I might break through this belief. It worked.

Linda began the road to "The High Chaparral," Hollywood and analysis in her native Argentina. Orphaned at 13, a few years later she set off for France expecting to live with relatives. Stopping off in Mexico, her striking beauty attracted several movie offers and she decided to stay on and be a movie star.

When she finally made it to the States she had little trouble becoming a contract starlet capable of making the background of any scene attractive without acting. She married quite well and the Cinderella tale might have ended there with the poor little lass from South America living happiily after in her Beverly Hills palace. But life rarely plays that easily and Linda ended up in therapy.

* * *

"The marriage was bad for both of us," she now says. "We are very good frineds and can get along forever on a brother-sister relationship but trapped by marriage we were killing one another. I don't know if I will ever marry again. Marriage is too complicated a relationship to last happiily for life. You know a man six months or even a year, but after marriage you learn so many other things about him and you can't simply leave."

She saves as much money as possible even though her settlement left her with few financial problems. "I guess it's because I was so poor as a child," she explains.

"I like to know I have money in the bank. I also love beauty so I indulge myself a bit by putting as much as possible into paintings." She conceded that being surrounded by valuable art might also add to her feeling of security.

* * *

"I have worked at it so hard that I can go away on a trip for a week or two and have all my muscles back under control after 15 minutes. I believe in staying in shape. I never smoke or drink. Of course I have bad habits like everybody else. For one thing, I almost have a fetish about neatness. I run around the house picking up after everybody until I realized it was getting the best of me. Now I'm all right. At least I let my garage go to pot."

Actresses who came on the set to play a featured role in one episode of "The High Chaparral" could easily be at the mercy of Linda, the only female regular in the western. But, thanks to analysis, Miss Cristal lives by certain rules.

* * *

"I try to imagine how I would like to be treated on a strange set and I give each guest actress the same feeling of welcome. It is always very pleasant because when you give of yourself to somebody you almost always receive."

We have bever been through analysis (it's too expensive) but we must confess it's fun interviewing somebody who has spent a year or so turning themselves inside out for a psychiatrist because the groundwork has been done for us.

Canadian Art Prints Available

Hand-produced silkscreen reproductions by contemporary Canadian artists, in color, are now being made available across the country.

The Markgraf studio in Quebec was awarded a $9,600 grant by the Canada Arts Council for this purpose in 1967. The paintings chosen for reproduction by this process have been selected by a committee of Canadian art museum directors.

Canada Council official David Silcox stated that the grant was aimed at bringing a wider variety of Canadian works into the growing market for high-quality art reproductions. He indicated that the artists represented have expressed satisfaction at the faithfulness to their originals.

Distributed commercially by Canadian Art Reproductions, Vancouver (for the Western area), the prints will be available at art gallery sales desks, picture framers, and department stores. They range in size from 15"x22" to 29"x19" and cost $16 each.

Of the 23 artists in the series Vancouver Island is represented by Maxwell Bates' "The Beach" and E. J. Hughes' "Qualicum Beach."

Liner's Last Voyage Cuts Old Empire Link

By GEOFFREY MOORHOUSE

LONDON — At four bells in the afternoon watch on Friday last week (2 p.m. to landlubbers) a long link with Britain's imperial past was finally severed.

The liner Chusan slipped out of Southampton for Sydney by way of Bombay.

It was the last time a P & O passenger vessel would sail from what was once the heart of the Empire to what is now more obviously India than ever before.

Like the agency messages said next morning, "there is a touch of sadness in the offices of P & O, the shipping line which helped develop and supply the needs of the British Raj."

The Peninsular and Oriental Line, in fact, was as inseparable from Empire-building as much as the Gatling gun and M and B tablets.

* * *

It was for generations the main line of communication between Britain and her outposts east of Suez. It produced the one word in the language whose origins were in the lore of every schoolboy at least until the Empire had finally collapsed.

From Eton to the scrubbiest elementary school in Lancashire they all knew that "Posh" was first coined by P & O shipping clerks as an abbreviation for passengers booked to said Portside Out, Starboard-side Home, which kept the awful oriental sun from their delicate complexions; if they could afford it.

The P & O link between Britain and India goes back to September, 1842, when the Hindostan put out of Southampton Water for the first time.

* * *

This was an enormous craft by the standards of the time, topping 2,000 tons where Brunel's Great Western had weighed in at 1,340. She was also one of the first vessels to be built for her passengers, rather than her cargo.

The designers produced a new arrangement of cabins and saloons, and assured prospective customers that "the rush of water along the vessel's side will not, as in the usual plan, be heard close to the ear."

From this beginning P & O became the major power on the seas between here and India. It conveyed military men to put down natives in nasty frontier skirmishes, and genteel ladies like Adele to be fearful and wondering at the blinding harshness of it all.

P & O did this for over a century with style. It built its vessels firmly, it decorated them with heavy grace, and it crewed them with Lascars as far as it could, both because this meant cheap labor and an engaging touch of the exotic.

* * *

But two very obvious facts of life have made the sailing of the Chusan the last one from Southampton to Bombay.

The first was Indian independence, which cut into the traffic. The second was the closing of the Suez Canal after the six-day war.

Henceforth all P & O boats bound for Australia will travel by way of Panama or else round the Cape without that economic excursion up the Indian Ocean.

There were only 51 passengers booked for Bombay on this final voyage; and that in a ship which could carry 990. Time has finally called "Pax" to Britannia by way of P & O.

Canoes Race Across Broken Ice of St. Lawrence River

Ice and Snow Can Be Fun

By MARCEL RIOUX

QUEBEC — Snow, ice, colorful toques, a friendly mardi-gras atmosphere, people and more people—all the ingredients for the annual winter carnival in this historic provincial capital with its winding streets.

The ingredients have been injected gradually in the new year and the pot will come to a full boil Jan. 28-Feb. 10 when thousands of visitors join with thousands of French-speaking Quebecers for carnival hoop-la.

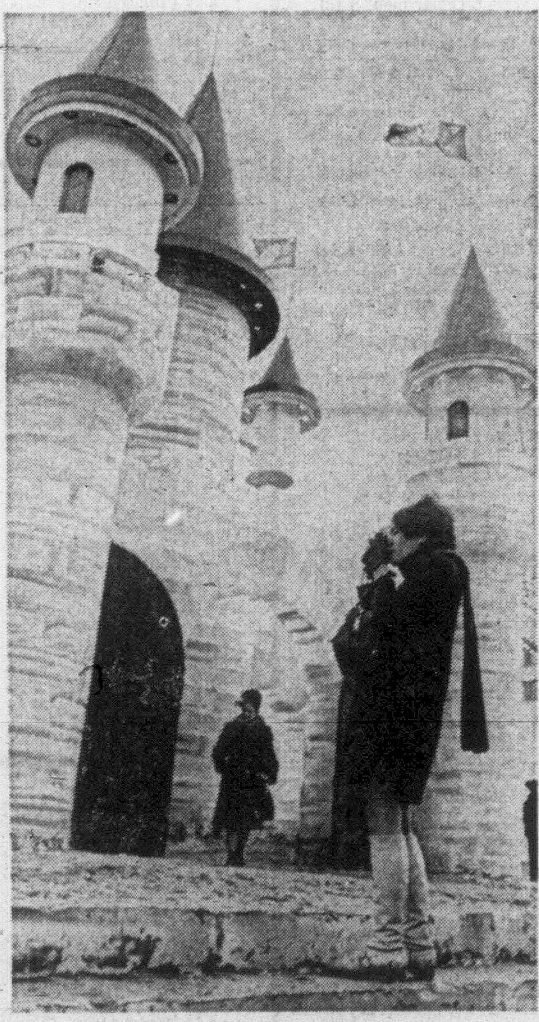
There's hardly any accommodation left available. As in past years, the narrow streets of the city will be jammed with singing, carousing onlookers and participants during the two-week midwinter blowout.

It has been the same thing, at this time of year, ever since 1955. Carnival '70 is certain to continue the tradition.

ICE BECOMES ART

Bonhomme Carnaval's ice palace, in d'Youville Square the city centre, has started to look like something more than a pile of large chunks of ice. There will be street dancing around the palace each night during the two weeks.

Ste. Therese Street, in Lower Town Quebec, is known as "Carnival Street." It is lined with hand-made snow and ice sculptures, fantastic creations of residents who have built some as high as the second storey of their homes and some almost hiding the entire front of buildings.



Ice Palace Centre of Festivities

The sculptures depict men, women, animals, fairy-tale characters—anything and everything. They are made with wet snow, which freezes in the seasonally-zero weather.

Two major parades are held during the carnival, on the two Saturday nights. The first this year will be in Lower Town Jan. 31 and the second in Upper Town Feb. 7.

Each parade, both gay and colorful with lighted floats and singing marchers, is preceded the night before by a huge ball.

The Regency Ball emphasizes the era of French kings. Guests wear costumes depicting historical figures. And the special guest at the ball this year will be movie actress Sophia Loren. Last year it was Grace Kelly, princess of Monaco.

A week later the modern and sophisticated Queen's Ball is held. Guests will include Premier and Mrs. Jean-Jacques Bertrand and the queen of the Calgary Stampede. Last year's guest was Prime Minister Trudeau.

CROSS THE RIVER

In addition to the balls, there are auto and snowmobile races on the Plains of Abraham Feb. 1. On Sunday, Feb. 8, there will be rowboat races across the ice-clogged St. Lawrence River from Levis to Quebec City.

Small stuffed tokens of Bonhomme Carnaval, the symbolic snowman figure of the festival, are bought everywhere. It is Bonhomme Carnaval who reigns, with the queen and her six duchesses, over the carnival.

Marcel Rochette, general director, says this year's events should attract thousands of visitors who will spend more than $15,000,000 in the area. About $670,000, collected from business and service groups, will be spent on Carnival '70.

BEETHOVEN BONANZA

BRATISLAVA — Lovers of Beethoven might consider taking up residence in this Czechoslovak city on the Danube for the rest of 1970.

To commemorate the 200th anniversary of the composer's birth, the Slovak Philharmonic Orchestra this year will perform all of Beethoven's nine symphonies, all of his piano concertos, his violin concerto, the triple concerto for piano, violin and cello, and his oratorio.

Shadbolt Show Opens in Ottawa

OTTAWAW (CP) — A retrospective exhibition of the work of one of Canada's leading contemporary artists, Jack Shadbolt of Vancouver was opened by Public Works Minister Arthur Laing at the National Gallery this week.

Paintings and drawings, assemblages, sculptures and murals make up the exhibit, organized in co-operation with the Vancouver Art Gallery.

Born in England, Mr. Shadbolt grew up in Victoria and artist Frederick Varley. In 1966 he resigned after 20 years as head of the drawing and painting section of the studied under Group of Seven Vancouver School of Art.

Comic Writer Takes Own Life

ROME (AP) — Aldo de Benedetti, 77, one of Italy's most popular and funniest playwrights for half a century, died this week. Police said he took his own life by gas.

De Benedetti wrote scores of plays and 120 movie scripts, all in a light vein with a romantic touch. He reached the peak of fame in the 1930s.

Mrs. de Beneditti said the playwright, who had been suffering from circulatory ailments, complained often that the theatre and cinema world had forgotten him. Still, one of his plays, The Last Five Minutes, was scheduled to be staged for television later this month.

STAMP NEWS

Canada Centennial Issues

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

On Jan. 27, Canada will release two 6-cent commemoratives, one for Manitoba's centennial, and the other for the centennial of the Northwest Territories.

Featured on the blue, red and yellow Manitoba stamp is a large "X" symbolizing Manitoba as the "cross-roads of Canada." Below the X is "Centenaire du Manitoba Centennial 1870-1970." In the upper left hand corner is "Canada," and "6" is in the upper right hand corner. This adhesive was designed by K. C. Lockhead of Winnipeg, and it was lithographed by the Canadian Bank Note Co. Ltd., Ottawa. It measures 40mm by 24mm, and tagged copies will be issued.

The 1,304,903 - square - mile area now known as the Northwest Territories largely came into the limelight through the search for the Northwest Passage and the quest for furs.

The successful voyage of the Nonsuch (honored by a 1968 Canadian stamp) led the way for the incorporation (by King Charles II on May 2, 1670) of Prince Rupert, Prince James, and 16 other men as "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay." Their immense territory, practically all of which was purchased by Canada in 1869, included what is now Manitoba.

Manitoba was likely first visited by Europeans when Admiral Sir Thomas Button discovered the Nelson River in 1612. The Red River Rebellion (1869-70) under the leadership of Louis Riel (1844-85) made the federal government establish the Province of [illegible]0.

Because [illegible] toba became known as the postage stamp province. Its boundaries were subsequently enlarged in 1881 and in 1912 to its present size of 251,000 square miles.

Since 1967 the capital of the Northwest Territories has been Yellowknife, a community on Great Slave Lake's north arm. Winnipeg (formerly Fort Garry) was incorporated in 1873.

There will probably be a Canadian stamp placed on sale next year to mark the 100th anniversary of the birth in Victoria, B. C. of the painter Emily Carr (d. 1945). Also, a new definitive set may appear in 1971.

The U. S. 6-cent Edgar Lee Masters adhesive will be issued Aug. 22 in Petersburg, Illinois, where he is buried.

Four British Indian Ocean Territory stamps featuring ships and a portrait of HM Queen Elizabeth II came out Dec. 15. They were originally scheduled for issuance on Oct. 15.

New Mormon Head

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UPI) — The Mormon Church Friday elevated its senior apostle, 93-year-old Joseph Fielding Smith, to become the 10th church president and prophet.

DEVELOPMENT of art in Victoria during the last 100 years, the evolution of artists here, the creation of an appreciative audience and the establishment of art institutions will be discussed by Colin Graham in an address to the University Extension Association of Victoria on Monday evening. Graham, director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, will also offer a forecast of the future of art in this community during the lecture which will start at 8:15 in Room 144, MacLaurin Building, and is open to the public.

No Talent Needed For Cabinet Post

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Good-humordly, tre government has stated officially what the public has long suspected: It doesn't require any particular talent to get into the cabinet.

The only real qualification, says Privy Council President Donald Macdonald, is to be a member of the Commons or Senate.

Kenneth Robinson, Liberal MP for Toronto Lakeshore, asked in writing for the name of the individual in each department responsible for written replies to Commons questions.

The answer turned out to be not some functionary but the minister of each department.

Mr. Robinson had asked:

"What is the degree of competence required for such a position?"

"Maximum obtainable" Mr. Macdonald replied laconically.

And the only qualification required to reach the position was membership in the Commons or Senate.

SOME WIT

Mr. Trudeau said Jan. 13 that George Hees, Conservative MP for Prince Edward Hastings, could refuel a plane during an Atlantic cross by breathing "into the tank."

On Jan. 16 he said that if Finance Minister Edgar Benson were Nero, as Mr. Hees said, then Mr. Hees was zero.

Well, as Benjamin Disraeli once said: "A majority is always better than the best repartee."

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker can still be as cutting as he ever was.

This shaft was aimed at Otto Lang, minister without portbolio responsible for the wheat board: "I will never charge deliberate misleading of the House when stupidity affords an excuse."

CLEAR AS MUD

For obfuscation, perhaps nobody has ever topped the late prime minister Mackenzie King's "Conscription if necessary but not necessarily conscription."

But State Secretary Pelletier seemed to be trying when Heath Macquarrie, Conservative MP for Hillsborough, and Edward Broadbent, NDP member for Oshawa-Whitby, asked:

"What is the policy of the CBC regarding radio-television coverage of conventions of the major political parties in Canada."

Mr. Pelletier's reply:

"I am informed by the CBC as follows: It is the policy of the CBC to make convention coverage decisions on the basis of program judgment following assessment of the degree and kind of broadcast coverage warranted."

Concert Sunday

Conductor of the B.C. Telephone Choir, Leslie Monk, smiles when he looks back at the early days of the choir in the late fifties, and compares them with today.

"Those were the days when nobody talked back to me. They're an experienced, more sophisticated group now—and they do talk back."

There are other comparisons. "In the beginning we had a number of members who couldn't read music, . . . but everybody was most enthusiastic."

Today, the B.C. Telephone Choir is in its 15th consecutive season, it is 80 voices strong and recognized as one of the finest choirs in Western Canada.

Its first public concert was given in Holy Trinity Cathedral in New Westminster during the Christmas season of 1955.

Since then it has visited many communities throughout British Columbia and performed in Empire Stadium and in the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver, where its last appearance was with the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra.

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at McPherson Playhouse, the choir will perform a classical program under the auspices of Victoria Musical Art Society.

Assisting will be harpist Lorna Langley and vocal soloists Bette Cosar, soprano, and Campbell Buchanan, bass.

Tickets will be available at the door.

FOR THAT NEW GARDEN

Moving Plants . . . Right and Wrong

By JACK BEASTALL

Sooner or later most of us move to a new home and have to decide which garden plants shall go with us and which shall be left.

There is no doubt that sentiment causes indecision. A lot of plants we are growing, to which we have become attached, have greater sentimental value than garden value.

Jack

Some of these plants are old varieties long since superseded. Sentiment is the only reason we have not thrown them out years ago.

To move them or not is something the individual must decide. Quite often, in the case of old specimens, it would be more satisfactory to root some cuttings rather than move the old plant.

Rooted cuttings are an excellent means of transferring plants to a new garden, provided we know far enough in advance that a move is likely.

Always there is the question of whether any plants may be moved from a property that has been sold. Unless we specify that certain plants are not included in the sale we may find ourselves liable for some expensive replacements.

In this case we are safer to take cuttings rather than the plants.

Not all plants transplant readily. Some are difficult for an experienced nurseryman to move, and almost impossible for the average gardener.

In this group I would place established conifers. These are very sensitive to root damage and only those of real value are worth considering.

●

Any plant belonging in the group that resents moving is better left where it is. If desired in the new garden, a small transplantable size should be purchased. This saves a lot of work and precludes losing the plant entirely.

In the last 25 years hybridizers have given us many greatly improved forms of popular plants.

Before attempting to move old plants it would be worth while investigating these newer introductions, for we could discover their initial cost to be considerably less than the time and labor involved in moving.

Some plants take kindly to moving. Forsythias, spireas, and philadelphus varieties will renew themselves rapidly even when cut back to one-inch stumps, and their root systems are not easily damaged.

Hydrangeas in all forms, weigelas, and buddleias are not difficult. These are worth consideration after checking the later introductions.

Tips For Home Gardeners

Climbing plants need some thought before a decision is made. Many gardeners wish to have their clematis or wisteria in the new garden, but is it worth the chance?

If the climbing plant has been established for 10 years or so, its root system will be extensive making root loss inevitable. Top growth will have to be cut back to a couple of feet. In most instances starting a young plant would be better.

●

Transplanting time for these kinds of trees is at the age of two to three years. A transplanted three-year-old will outstrip a five-year-old in a couple of years. Greater satisfaction results when young trees are purchased for the new garden.

Herbaceous perennials are no great problem. Most can be cut back at any time and moved, providing a little care and common sense is used as well as the spade.

Since many herbaceous perennials must be renewed by division every five years, a small portion from the outside of an old clump provides an ideal start for a new garden.

A few of these perennials have but a brief period in which moving is successful. With these it is wise to purchase new stock at the correct planting time.

●

In this area, fall is the best time to move most of the commonly grown garden plants, exceptions being those with fleshy roots which, if damaged would rot away in a wet cold winter soil.

Spring is second choice, although any time from September until late April is satisfactory for dormant subjects.

The period from May until September is the problem time for most home gardeners. They have a feeling that moving plants during this interval is impossible.

Fortunately this is not true, although we readily admit it is more tricky than winter. Well worth remembering is that most planting and transplanting done in commercial nurseries takes place during late spring and summer when gardeners are not clamoring for orders.

By watering plants well for a week ahead of moving, avoiding the brief periods when the thermometer is around 75 deg. F., and having the place ready in the new garden so plants are not out of soil more than an hour or so, transplanting in summer can be successful.

Important points are to keep roots covered and moist, remove soft tips that show wilting, pack soil tightly against the roots when planting, and see that plenty of water reaches the roots after the job is completed.

While it is possible to move any plant successfully at any time of the year, providing the job is done properly, the home gardener is advised to think twice and weigh all possibilities before deciding.

Aside from rooted cuttings, the purchase of new plants is often the best policy.

WORK FOR WEEK

Choice plants of perennial phlox and aster can be propagated by taking cuttings from the base of plants early in year. Put the roots now into large pots of good soil and keep in a coldframe or a cold greenhouse, taking the new shoots as they reach an inch or two in length. Do not force with heat.

Plant ranunculus tubers for good range of rich orange, yellow and red globular flowers all summer. They need deep sandy yet rich soil and a sunny location.

In a similar place the seed of Anemone coronaria, the Crown-anemone, may be sown and some will flower in fall.

For an interesting hedge, fairly fast growing, consider Hornbeam, Carpinus betula, seen as a street tree on Government St. for three blocks near the brewery.

Grub out blackberries, broom or other unwanted growth but do not tramp on wet exposed soil more than necessary.

LOVABLE OLD CARVER COMES HOME

He Hobnobbed With Ritzy Palefaces and Indians

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER — It's been more than two years since Campbell River's most lovable character, 70-year-old Indian carver Jimmie King, headed for Los Angeles in a psychedelic bus with two young Americans.

And new he's back.

"I learn a lot, I seen a lot," said Jimmie, "but when I come back off the plane in Vancouver I look around and I say 'this is my God's Country'."

"Then I get back up here and walk into the Discovery Inn. Were they ever glad to see me!"

Jimmie's always held court in the pub where his companionship is sought by everyone including the tourists who flock here each summer.

To the towns people's astonishment in Nov. 1967, he went off with Peter and Jean Krasnakovich, who were here to collect Indian artifacts and carvings for their benefacteress, Mrs. Gallas of Santa Monica.

They'd commissioned Jimmie to carve a pole, paid him a substantial advance and then waited patiently for him to produce. He took a few swipes at the pole with his axe, but things weren't going so good so he headed for the pub.

Everyone here just laughed. "They'll never get him to finish that pole . . . you wait and see, He'll be back in a week."

But he fooled the doubters. He actually got it done in the garage beside Mrs. Gallas' luxurious home. More than 250 people came to the dedication ceremony including movie producers and museum curators.

"They even got a big holy man from Hawaii to bless the pole," said Jimmie.

"Well, I stayed two and a half months with the millionaire lady.

"I was real embarrassed to live in a place with servants and swimming pools . . . this Indian never been in such a good place.

"Then I get an invitation to attend the convention of 52 tribes in Burbank.

"Oh boy, was that good!"

He said 3,000 people attended and there were Indian dances every night.

"Chief Jumping Horses was head of the orchestra and lady dancers were wearing moccasins that cost $60-$70 apiece.

"That's when I meet Morning Star, a Shoshonee Indian princess.

"She says 'come on up to my place in Altadena for a visit'.

"Well that was really good so I stay a year and a half."

"While I was there I meet this nurse with a Volkswagen. She's a paleface and a real high-class society lady.

"Every Thursday she takes me for a drive to see things. We even went to New Mexico and come back Firday."

While he was at Morning Star's he got a letter from Bob Hope. The actor, who is a regular visitor in this area, befriended Jimmie years ago when he was carving a pole in front of the hotel, here.

"He told me to 'come down to Hollywood, old chief, and bring a friend.'

"So I took this guy with me who is a six-nation Indian from Brantford."

He said they went to the studio—he thinks it was Paramount and Hope took them into his private bar for a drink.

"So we had a little snort . . . he's just got a little bar, and you know them big guys . . . they just give little drinks," and his plump hands gestured in disgust that all they'd got was an vunce apiece.

He said they stayed an hour but they didn't get any lunch.

"But those Americans are real friendly people. I have such a good time I wasn't homesick too much."

•

He came back to Canada this July and spent the next months carving poles at the Capilano Indian reserve, before returning to Campbell River.

So old Jimmie's back again and, like he says — will the tourists ever be glad to see him.

He thought nothing of charging them a dollar apiece for signing his name on chips from the pole he was carving.

But they weren't short changed because his irrepresible humor rubs off on everyone he meets.

He says next May he's going back to Vancouver to teach carving to young Indians under a national Indian arts project.

What are his plans for this winter?

"You ask too many questions," he grinned. "You better stop now or I start talking with forked tongue."

Malaspina College Seeks Out Artists

The successful launching of an evening class in interior design and decoration at Lake Cowichan; as an off-campus program of Malaspina College, has pointed up the need to know more about local artists, painters and craftsmen, according to the instructor of the course.

Gale Tower, who is teaching the course, says, "We need to meet regional artists and craftsmen working in paints, fabrics and other materials, with a view to making use of their work not only in the class at Lake Cowichan but in the whole art program of Malaspina College."

He described the course as a practical program which has attracted homemakers who are primarily interested in improving or redesigning their present home decoration. In addition, there are several students who are planning or actually building new homes and are taking the design and decoration classes in preparation.

Mrs. Dorothy Clode, director of adult education in Lake Cowichan with whose co-operation the course was established, stresses its practical value. "We are not so concerned with theory," Mrs. Clode said, "as with the practial application to decoration in the home."

The course began Jan. 13 and continues for 13 weeks.

Controversial Man To Speak at Uvic

Dr. Immanual Velikovsky, author of the controversial book Worlds in Collision, will speak at the University of Victoria early in March.

The book, published in 1950, linked ancient accounts of a world-wide disaster around 1500 B.C. with Venus being expelled as a comet from the giant planet Jupiter.

Velikovsky said several brushes with earth, caused earthquakes, floods and the Biblical rain of fire before Venus settled into its present orbit.

At a time when Venus was believed to have about the same temperature as the earth, Velikovsky predicted Venus would be found to be hot.

Velikovsky also predicted that Jupiter would be discovered as a source of radio waves, and that the earth was surrounded by an extensive electro-magnetic belt.

He correctly forecast the composition of the atmosphere on Venus.

Efforts to suppress his book were made by leading scientists, and the doctor's publisher was forced to sell publication rights to another firm because of a U.S. university boycott.

Now 74, Russian-born Velikovsky became a psychiatrist and an associate of Sigmund Freud and also knew Albert Einstein.

AT FIRST UNITED CHURCH

Bishop De Roo to Preach

Bishop Remi De Roo, head of the Roman Catholic Church on Vancouver Island, will preach in Victoria's First United Church Sunday Feb. 1 at 11 a.m.

The occasion is the 108th anniversary of the church as a congregation.

On Feb. 3, 1862, two women and 14 men met in Smith's Hall, Government Street, to form the First Presbyterian Church on Vancouver Island.

First services were held in Moore's Hall, at the corner of Yates and Langley, and were conducted by Rev. John Hall, former missionary of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland.

A site was then acquired at the corner of Blanshard and Pandora — where the B.C. Hydro building now stands — and the cornerstone was laid by Chief Justice David Cameron on April 9, 1863.

* * *

The completed church, built at a cost of $6,000, was dedicated in November 1863. It was severely damaged by fire in 1883, but the congregation made a big effort to raise funds and the building was restored and rededicated on Jan. 4, 1884.

The present church, at Quadra and Balmoral, was dedicated on May 2, 1915. The congregation continued to grow until 1925 when it elected to join the United Church of Canada.

First Presbyterian became First United at choral service on June 10, 1925.

Over the years First United has been famous for its champion basketball teams and award-winning choirs and many of its members have won distinction in public life.

"We extend a warm welcome to Bishop De Roo at our morning anniversary service," said Rev. Robert Morris, the present minister. "It is indicative of the growing friendship among our city churches."

Rev. John Watson, minister of First Baptist Church, will preach in the evening at 7:30 p.m. The congregation of Metropolitan United Church will be guests at the service.

UVIC SERIES DISCUSSES FAITH

Can Faith Make Sense?

The first of a series of 12 lectures on this subject was given by Canon Hilary Butler at the University of Victoria this week.

The lectures will continue every Tuesday at 8 p.m. and will be followed by open discussion. They are sponsored by the university's evening division.

Leadership Course Opens

A course in group leadership and participation opened in St. David's Fellowship Hall, Cordova Bay, Sunday, and will continue for four Sundays at 7:30 p.m.

"Most of us work in some sort of group," says Rev. H. Gordon Walker, who is directing the course, "but few of us really know how to work effectively in a group, and fewer still are able to lead a group.

"That is why we are holding this course. It is conducted in a friendly and informal atmosphere."

Applications may be made to Nancy Finch, secretary, tel: 658-8563.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Tentmaking Ministry Expected

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

"Well, Reverend—made any good tents lately?"

My Irritable Friend greeted me with those words as I entered his study a few days ago to share a jug of coffee with him.

He then quoted from a recent lengthy article in a magazine which had the title, "The New Ministry: Bringing God Back to Life".

The magazine declared that during the new decade "the ministry will become ever more flexible" and added that "there will be more tentmaking ministries". (It pointed out that the term comes from St. Paul who worked as a tentmaker to support himself during his ministry.)

M. I. F. and I were not inclined to quarrel with the prediction. We agreed that the Church will have to make extensive use of part-time ministers if it is to cover all bases.

There has been in recent years a great deal of discussion about the tentmaking ministry and, indeed, some quite effective exercises in it. M. I. F. suggested that I am a tentmaker myself, in a small, grubby sort of way, through my moonlighting at the typewriter. He also hinted —not seriously, I hope—that he should share in my modest proceeds from it because of all the splendid inspiration he gives me.

He also wondered how some of us middle-aged, full-time pastors would be able to go tentmaking. Not all of us have marketable skills by which we could support ourselves in whole or in part—although most of us probably could be quickly retreaded for some kind of fairly useful work.

M. I. F. reminded me that in his youth he had served a brief apprenticeship in butchering but he fears that over the years he has lost all his block-and-cleaver cunning.

He then pointed out, with just a trace of asperity in his voice, that most of the talk of the wonders of the new tentmaking ministry seems to be coming from men not now in the parish ministry—full-time academics and full-time officials in the higher ecclesiastical reaches.

He admitted that these brothers may see the big picture in a way denied pastors—but he does have serious reservations about the blithe confidence with which some of them commend tentmaking to the boys in the parishes.

He had a few hard words to say about one of our United Church HQ bureaucrats who a few months ago made the claim that most ministry in the future would be the tentmaking kind.

"I'll take that boy seriously," snarled M. I. F., "when I hear that he does an early shift as a bus-driver or eel-jellier or plorial-embroiderer or whatnot and then later in the day goes to church headquarters and, simply out of the goodness of his heart, does his share of that paperwork which so thrills and inspires us simple grassroots fellows!"

Then, to keep things in a proper perspective, he concluded our little seminar by giving me a messy piece of paper on which he had penned some notes under the title, "The Ideal Non-tentmaking Pastor for Today". He said that I could use it in my nefarious moonlighting so here it is:

"Today's ideal pastor is not expected to put in more than an honest day's work, but he should be on call 24 hours a day seven days a week.

"He attends many meetings and social functions, participates in all worthy community projects and causes, is assiduous in visiting his people in their homes—but he must, of course, spend long hours in reading and study to maintain a reputation for sound scholarship.

"He sounds a prophetic note in his preaching, but never causes anyone any discomfort or unnecessary expense. He has the courage of his convictions—and the tact always to utter them in ways which cannot possibly offend anyone.

"He has many exciting, original ideas—all of which have been time-tested elsewhere."

Tentmaking anyone?

Distinguished Churchman To Address Local Group

Dr. Visser 't Hooft, described as one of the most distinguished churchmen in the world today, will visit Victoria next week.

He was the first general secretary of the World Council of Churches when it was formally constituted in 1947 and continued in this office until his retirement in 1966.

"He has been a key man in the world-wide ecumenical movement of this century," says Canon Charles Bishop, acting chairman of the fellowship committee of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Arriving in Victoria Tuesday night, Dr. Hooft will address a luncheon meeting in the Empress Hotel Wednesday at 12:15 noon organized by the Council of Churches.

Mayor Courtney Haddock and leading representatives of church and government have been invited.

At 3 p.m. the same day, Dr. Hooft will meet the executive of the Council of Churches in St. John's Anglican Church.

Thursday at 12:30 p.m. he will speak at a public meeting in the Elliott Building, University of Victoria, before attending a luncheon in the Faculty Club.

Afterwards at 3 p.m., Dr. Hooft will meet the Committee of Ten, an organization of Anglican and United Church clergymen set up by Archbishop Harold Sexton in 1968.

Huntsmen Assemble Prior to Unleashing of Hounds

'NEW HUMANE STYLE'

Foxless Hunt Chases Foxy Scent

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Victoria's first fox hunt in 50 years got off the mark today with everything but the fox.

Hounds and riders pursued, not a live animal, but a horse-drawn sack containing the droppings of a fox.

And even the droppings had to be imported from the mainland.

Some 45 men and women, ages ranging from 14 to 61, pursued their quarry, behind a pack of six hounds, over a circuitous 12-mile route over meadow and woodland to a finishing point near Prospect Lake Community Hall.

The rider trailing the fox-scented sack was given a 10-minute start from Echo Valley Farm. A while later, the fierce barking of the hounds, when they picked up the scent, was the signal for the start of the chase, emphasized by a shrill blast on the huntmaster's horn.

●

The horses then broke into a gallop.

Participating were riders from Victoria, Comox, Duncan, Courtenay and members of the Fraser Valley Hunt Club from Vancouver, Cloverdale and Langley.

Leading the chase were three red-coated veterans — hunt-masters Col. John Reynolds, Vancouver, and Dr. John Gilray, Cloverdale, and Edward Simpson, president of the Fraser Valley Hunt Club.

The hounds and many of the horses were shipped in vans aboard the first ferry from Vancouver.

Before the start of the hunt, riders and horses paraded around the paddock at Echo Valley Farm. Some of the horses caught the excitement of the occasion and reared dangerously, but no one was thrown.

"We hope to make this an annual event on Vancouver Island," said Col. Reynolds from Vancouver. "We hold two or three hunts every year on the mainland and they are extremely popular."

Among Victoria riders were Miss Bo Cuppage, Miss Alison Robb, Mrs. Sandi Cherry, Miss Dina Gibson, Clifford Clark and Glen Dunlop.

Trim and elegant astride her horse Vodka was Mrs. Pamela Arthur from Langley, who used to chase live foxes over the rolling English meadows.

"They still do," she said, "but I think the animal lovers would be a great deal happier if English huntsmen chased only the scent of the fox."

●

Mrs. Rosemary Woodward from Vancouver described the hunt as an exhilarating exercise and said she hoped the hunt would be repeated next year.

"It's tremendous fun," said 17-year-old Melanie White, one of the youngest riders. "You get the first thrill when the horses line up for the start."

Veteran huntsman Edward Simpson said fox hunting on Vancouver Island is very different from England because of the rocky terrain.

"In a sense it's more adventurous," he said.

The red coats of the leaders made a bold splash of color against the grey sullen skies and the riders were in high spirits.

A hunt breakfast was to be held after the chase at Echo Valley Farm. Some of today's huntsmen will ride in a second hunt at Duncan Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

Nun Asks Children To Save Biafra

SISTER MARGARET
. . . wants a day of vigil next week

She issued an appeal Friday for children to set aside the first school day next week as a day of vigil to become more sensitive to the condition of Biafran children.

"I have deep conviction they can find solutions," Sister Margaret said, urging principals and teachers to cooperate with children in creating a day of prayer and information on Biafra.

★ ★ ★

She said she hopes that such a movement could become world-wide with children awakened to the Biafran suffering being able to exert pressure on parents and through them on governments to act quickly in the desperate situation.

Sister Margaret said she has been intensely concerned about the situation in Biafra since the fall of the secessionist territory two weeks ago.

She has already had experience with a children's vigil held at St. Ann's recently and feels that it is one approach to the Biafran problem that has not yet been tried.

She hopes that a successful "children's crusade" on Biafra would lead to long-term programs involving children in the lives of their fellows around the world.

Sister Margaret said she has "the blessing" of Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo in the effort.

She said schools could cooperate in the effort and hoped that the authorities would see a vigil in far broader and more humanitarian terms than simply a day away from arithmetic lessons.

Children haven't been given the chance to "come up with solutions" and they should be, she said. But the time to act was now because thousands of Biafran children could die in a few days' time, she said.

Gung Hay Fat Choy To You Too, Friend

Gung Hay Fat Choy, which means wishing you lots of prosperity, will be frequently heard in Victoria's Chinatown Feb. 6—the Chinese New Year.

According to the Chinese calendar, it will be 4668 or the Year of the Dog.

FINE TRAITS

Bessie Tang, an authority on Chinese customs, said according to the Chinese almanac people born in the year of the dog have all the fine traits of human nature.

"Dog-year people inspire other people's confidence and know how to keep private secrets absolutely private," she said. "Other people hold them in high regard and consider them fine persons."

Dog-year people also are champions of justice, she said.

"They don't like small talk," she added, "and generally make good leaders."

Most Victoria Chinese-Canadians will celebrate the entry of the New Year with a special dinner at midnight.

On this occasion "Jie," a special dish not tainted with meat, is served to all members of the family.

Simple greeting cards will also be exchanged along with red-packaged coins.

Both the packages and cards will probably bear the words Gung Hay Fat Choy.

According to an ancient custom, all debts are paid up before New Year's Day.

VISIT PATIENTS

Members of the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club will also visit patients at the Chinese Hospital on Fisgard. They will distribute pastries and other treats.

New Year's celebrations many years ago were celebrated with more gusto.

Air was filled with the constant din of hundreds of exploding firecrackers to frighten away the evil spirits.

But all this has changed—the old order changeth, so to speak.

Ask The Times

Q. At one time there was an area in Esquimalt known as the Transfer. Where was it, and how did it get the name? M.J.R.

A. The area known as the Transfer was located on a high pinnacle of ground immediately north of Lampson Street School. It became known as the Transfer during the days that the Willow Transfer used it as a turning point for their transfer system, using the spot to water and fodder their horses.

HELICOPTER TO BUILD FROM SKY

Building from a helicopter?

This is the technique to be used by a local construction firm Sunday morning when the helicopter will lift a piece of equipment into a downtown building site.

Dominion Construction Co. Ltd. will use the helicopter to lift a 1000-pound fan into the Toronto-Dominion Bank building project at the corner of Douglas and Johnson in a 10-minute aerial operation.

The copter will start at about 9 a.m.

Children 'Victimized' By 'Deadbeat' Charge

Innocent children will suffer the detrimental effects of a provincial cabinet minister's public reference to "deadbeats" on the welfare rolls, Mrs. Susan Talbot of the Community Action group charged today.

There are 49,524 children of welfare recipients in British Columbia being held up to public ridicule through Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi's statements, she said.

"Statements like that are definitely going to downgrade those children who can watch television or read the newspapers," she said.

'AFRAID AGAIN'

She said there is "no way Gaglardi can rectify the damage he's already done unless he's willing to make a public apology."

"We've been working hard to build up these people's morale enough that they'll eventually be able to get by without social assistance.

"Then Gaglardi comes along and wrecks the constructive work we've done. These people are afraid again. They're afraid to ask for anything for fear they'll be cut from the welfare roll.

'LOT OF BLUNDERS'

"They must be made to feel that social assistance when they are in need is a right, not a charity."

The Community Action Group is composed of average, self-supporting families that work with needy families on social welfare.

The organization has recently been active criticizing Gaglardi for his statements.

"I think he makes a lot of blunders," Mrs. Talbot said, "I hope he is just being stupid, because if he's serious he's the last man we need for a social welfare minister."

Victoria Delays Health Pullout

Victoria city council Thursday gave the provincial government 30 days to find an answer to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health cost-sharing formula.

The decision to wait before pulling out to operate an independent health service was reached reluctantly.

Oak Bay Council had asked Victoria to delay the pullout for at least 30 days and Ald. Cecil Parrott asked that their appeal be heard.

★ ★ ★

"We wouldn't do ourselves any good if we just cut this off," Parrott said.

The rest of the council agreed to wait but left no doubt that at the end of that period they want a cost-sharing formula which will see all people in the district paying the same for health services.

At present, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria pay roughly $2 per head more for health services than residents of Sāanich.

School Girls Slack Off Now the Rules Are Lax

By DON VIPOND

One big reason girls wanted to wear slacks to school was because the rules were against it.

Dress regulations at many Greater Victoria high schools have been relaxed lately and what has happened won't surprise parents.

Wearing slacks, from jeans to pant suits, underwent an initial flurry of popularity. But that has faded and the majority of girls have returned to wearing skirts and dresses.

It proves once again how young people like to lean on the rules. When the rule disappears, so does the challenge it represented.

A sampling of four local high schools, two senior and two junior, shows three of them permit girls to wear slacks now. Fewer girls are doing so.

Mt. Douglas principal Jack Lowther said Thursday as many as 50 per cent of the girls wore slacks when it became apparent earlier in the school year they were no longer on the forbidden list.

But now girls in slacks are down to about one in 10, depending on how cold the weather.

MAXIS RARE

Peter Boldt, principal at Oak Bay junior, reports the same experience and adds there appears to be a fair amount of parental resistance to slacks.

He has had only two calls from parents on the subject and both were against permitting slacks.

At Victoria senior secondary, vice-principal Reg Reid confirms the trend and anticipates an even more marked swing from slacks as spring weather arrives.

He notes, too, the rarity of maxi outfits, maybe because it gets tiring holding a long skirt or coat up from muddy sidewalks and steps.

At S. J. Willis junior secondary there is a ban on slacks but principal Horace Dawson says there has been little pressure from either students or parents against it. The prohibition is relaxed in cold weather.

"If enough parents want their kids to dress any old way, they'll come and tell me," he says.

Arthur Mayse . . .

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S chief exponent of the Good Life has promised stiffer environmental controls, thereby paying lip service at least to a cause that a smart politician can no longer afford to ignore politically.

On the strength of Premier Bennett's conservation record, I will be hard to convince that he hasn't merely added a handy new public relations catchword to his store.

Certainly, Social Credit's environmental control score to date isn't one to encourage implicit belief in a change of attitude.

There is, for instance, the matter of strip-mining, welcomed into this province despite clear evidence that it destroys whatever landscape it intrudes upon.

There is also the recent decision by our pollution control board, a limb of government, which will permit the dumping of 26,000 gallons of sewage daily into Trincomali Channel from a Saltspring subdivision.

These are recent examples of this government's approach to environmental control. There are others: in fact, the list is as long as it is dismal.

But if Premier Bennett really intends to back his assurance with action, the results should presently be visible.

Utah Construction and Mining, the American giant that plans to export copper and molybdenum ore to Japan from an open-pit operation, provides a test case. The company seeks to dump its destructive wastes into Rupert Inlet north along Vancouver Island at the rate of 9.3 million gallons a day.

Such planning is typical of American firms that have found exportable resources and a casual attitude toward pollution in our province.

A government honestly concerned with environmental control can give only one answer to such an application That is a firm 'No.'

If that reply is given, we can begin to hope that the leopard has indeed changed its spots.

If it isn't, the Throne Speech utterance can be discarded as a promotional gimmick not backed by intent.

TO FLORENDA JOY DICK her heart-saving operation of almost a year ago is little more than a fading dream. However, the sunny little second-grader has been given a permanent reminder of those days when a city was pulling for her.

★

He never met his subject, but he saved her pictures as they appeared in the Times, and with them for his guide, he set to work.

Florenda, up at 6 a.m. next morning, chose it as the first of her presents to be opened.

★

"A gift to be cherished," says Mrs. Dick, "and we'd like the artist who sent it to know how grateful we all are. The picture hangs over the mantel in our living room, and it's already been admired by many relatives and friends."

Florenda? Delighted with the painting too. And going great guns.

I'M NEVER FULLY CONvinced that spring has come until the year's first skunk cabbage glows yellow among the lowland salmonberry tangles. But by the look of things, that day won't be too long arriving.

By way of a progress report, the early leafbuds of the bitter cherry have fattened, and in sheltered areas, you may see them spangled green among the greys and browns of the woods.

Our dog is finding new grass to nibble, and the signs point to an early daffodil season.

There's also more than a hint of pink in the tight-sheathed buds of the Japanese plum. Prune off a few scraggly twigs, set them indoors in water, and in a day or two, they bloom.

Of all spring scents from a tame garden, there's none to match the bitter-sweet fragrance of those fluffy blossoms.

★

If you're new to Victoria, a splendid sight waits you. About a month from now, give or take and depending on the ways of the weather, you'll see entire suburban blocks laced with a froth of flowering plum.

That's the start of a floral deluge which runs clear through till fall pops the chrysanthemums.

Seems like every second person we meet these days is planning on flitting off on some trip or other . . . so we think it's an opportune time to tell you about some new dresses we saw at Impacts 'n' Imports which should go a long way towards answering any "travelling" lady's prayer! . . . They're sleeveless, with mock turtle neck and tie belts . . . patterned with big overlapping discs in color combinations like moss green, yellow and black . . . black, camel and grey, and navy, green and blue . . . on white grounds . . . Lovely new pieces by B.C. potters . . .

We heard a lady positively rhapsodizing over the Karen Bulow hand-woven ties which Mrs. Higgin was unpacking when we dropped into the Handloom the other day . . . "Some husband's in for a nice surprise," we thought! . . . The new modern colors of these ties are exciting . . . perfect with the colored shirts so popular today . . . Either three or four inches wide, and priced at $3 and $4 respectively . . . Bob Philips and Chris Thom are two Gulf Island potters whose work is appearing at the Handloom for the first time . . . and we think it's very distinctive and quite lovely . . . The Philips pieces are imaginative in shape with sort of a bumpy surface . . . We like his vases . . . covered jars in several sizes . . . and salt and pepper shakers which are real eye-catchers . . . Chris Thom has a lovely white teapot and cream and sugar set . . . a graceful vase in blurry blues and purples . . . and some charming little bowls . . . which could be used for a variety of things . . . Some of these are on their way to Japan right now . . . purchased by a Japanese gentleman who fell in love with them and is taking them home to use in the traditional tea ceremony! This new pottery is really quite inexpensive and we think you'll enjoy seeing it . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011.

Japan Promotes Mother Power

TOKYO (Reuters) — Under pressure from an expanding economy, Japan is turning to a new and virtually untapped source of labor—middle-aged mothers.

Government economic experts, faced with a shortage of workers to maintain Japan's phenomenal economic growth, think married women can help the country's industrial progress.

In particular, they want middle-aged and elderly women, who have already raised families, to take up jobs.

Japan's labor shortage is expected to grow more acute during the next five years because of the low post-war birth rate. The government's economic deliberation council is therefore drafting a new development program in the hope of attracting more women workers.

About 7,500,000 women in the 40-64 age group already work, mostly as domestics or on farms, and in the next five years the figure is expected to top 10,000,000.

The desire to work is becoming stronger in women of all ages as they become more independent—a post-war phenomenon—and seek a higher cultural standard.

Childbearing is already gradually reducing the number of working women in the 25-39 age group. Government experts say better nursery facilities might win back a few, but most attention is being paid to middle-aged and elderly women.

However, economists admit there are dangers in using older women workers, one of them being a possible sacrifice in quality. Japan has sustained a high economic growth rate through the availability of good quality workers graduating from universities.

Dye Lot Difference Shows

I have been asked several times recently, what to do when you find you don't have sufficient wool to finish your knitting and just can't find the same dye lot anywhere?

This does present quite a problem, I know, especially since another dye lot can look identical in the ball yet the chances are that there will be a distinct line if you begin with another dye lot in the middle of a front, back or sleeve.

If you are only a ball short, work the front bands or the collar with the new dye lot. If you are several balls short, you will have to work both sleevs in the new dye lot. While there will be a slight difference, only you will know, and the chances are it will go un-noticed.

If you are not sure of the amount you will require for your garment, very often the shop owner will put away a couple of extra balls, but naturally she will not hold these too long, or she may be left with just two balls of an odd dye lot.

I have been also asked about making machine buttonholes on the fronts of sweaters that have had the front bands backed with ribbon binding.

First it is most important to wash the ribbon. If there is going to be any shrinkage of the ribbon, it's better to have it happen before it is attached to the sweater.

Back both the button and buttonhole bands with the ribbon binding, making sure they are both the same length and trying not to stretch or draw in on the natural length.

Machine buttonholes can then be worked from the wrong side. In other words, the ribbon is uppermost, next to the machine foot. This makes for easier operation of the machine as the foot doesn't get tangled up in the knitted fibres.

Instructions are given for a hooded or collared jacket in the raglan style and can be buttoned or zippered. The skirt can be ribbed to simulate pleats, or worked in a basket weave stitch. The pullover, too, is raglan and has a centre front panel of mock cable stitch. There is also a choice of round neck or turtle neck.

Either a knitting worsted or a carefree sayelle can be used for this outfit. Instructions are for sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Strikes Sparks

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A married friend of my husband's is going around with the kind of woman you'd expect would openly go with a married man.

This couple dropped in unexpectedly one night. I was polite, but I told my husband that I did not want that woman in my home, so to please tell his friend not to bring her here again.

Well, they dropped by again last night and my husband welcomed them with open arms!

Abby, this woman is rude and ignorant, and spent the entire evening filing her fingernails. The noise of that emery board got on my nerves so severely I finally got up and excused myself.

After they left I told my husband again how I felt, and he said that was "their way of life" and I should accept it. Well, I don't care what they do, or how they live, but I will not "accept" it, and I don't think I should be expected to entertain trash like that in my home. I'd like your opinion.—Needs Support.

DEAR NEEDS: If your husband insists upon welcoming into his home people whose unconventional way of life is not acceptable to you, that would seem his "right." It is also your "right" to disapprove and to absent yourself from the company. That ought to tell somebody something; your husband, his friend, and the lady with the emery board.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is getting along in years, has taken ill and is now confined to her bed. She lives with me, but my biggest problem is keeping some of her friends away from her.

Mother has always been a very sociable person and she loves company, but some of her friends have more time than brains, and after they've paid mother a visit, it takes her days to recover from the setback.

Mother said that one of her friends told her that if she didn't change doctors she was as good as dead, because her doctor didn't know what he was doing.

Other friends bring her the most depressing news about who else is sick, dying, or dead.

One friend even asked Mother if she would please give her usual donation for the Heart Fund Drive now—in case she didn't live until February!

I am not able to sit in there and monitor every conversation, so what should I do?—Disgusted.

DEAR DISGUSTED: With "friends" like your mother has, she doesn't need any enemies. You would do your mother a service to quietly tell the offending visitors to bring only cheerful conversation or stay at home.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I got into a discussion on child rearing and we disagree on a point we'd like you to settle.

When brothers and sisters get into a fight about something do you think the parents should stay out of it and let the kids settle it in their own way? Or should parents intervene and give the children the benefit of their mature judgment?—B and L.

DEAR B AND L: That depends upon the seriousness of the fight, the age and sex of the children, and the way they propose to settle it. Children should be taught that might does not make right, and the one who slugs the hardest isn't necessarily right. Parents should use their mature judgment in determining whether or not they should intervene.

Population Control vs. the Pill: Is It Worth the Risk?

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, a turn-of-the-century women's leader, made it into the history books by telling the members of her sex that "Dante is dead. He has been dead for several centuries, and I think it is time that we dropped the study of his Inferno and turned our attention to our own."

Last week the 8½ million American women who take the pill must have been doing just that as a Senate committee heard testimony about the possibility that this drug may cause cancer.

These were not the first revelations that the pill may have terrible side effects for a certain percentage of the women who use it. For at least five years, there have been low key burblings that the pill may cause blood clots, stroke and frigidity.

Women have attributed a wide variety of symptoms to it, among which are varicose veins, skin discoloration, hair loss and emotional upset.

When you ask women if they reported these disturbing signs to their doctors, they often answer that their doctors told them to run along and not worry about it. This isn't so easy to do when the air is full of alarming news about the pill, but women, who are trained from early childhood to obedience, are frequently able to put their worries out of their minds and postpone thinking about this particular inferno.

●

From what we now know the only thing we can conclude is that it is too early to state with any assurance how safe or how dangerous the pill may be. This is a medical-research question which will have to wait on time, but there are other questions which can be brought up now and should have been brought up 10 years ago.

Why was the pill distributed wholesale when even less was known about its side effects than is known today.

The pill isn't the first recklessly marketed drug, but it would seem that in the case of a substance designed to be ingested by millions and millions of healthy people some special care would have been taken.

One of the reasons offered for treating people with drugs that may cause very bad reactions is that the side effects still aren't as bad as the disease. Undoubtedly there was enormous pressure from the people concerned about excess population to get this new and highly effective method of contraception into the widest possible use.

Some of them may have felt that population control is so important that it was worth the risk of killing and sickening an unknown number of women.

This would be an indefensible position even if there were not other, and possibly safer, contraceptive methods available. But all arguments for killing and hurting people for a higher cause are suspect. Maybe there are moments when such arguments have to be accepted, but never without debate and the utmost care.

With the pill there was no debate of this sort; we were all told, men and women, that the pill was safe.

Another reason that the pill may have been passed out in such casually large numbers is that women were destined to take it. Any fair person who looks over the history of the pill's distribution and who knows the position women occupy must wonder if the same procedures would have been followed if it were a male contraceptive.

There is no way to prove more care would have been exercised if men were supposed to take the pill, but medicine, like almost every other profession, is male dominated and men do tend to take care of themselves first and best.

You can also speculate that if there were more women professionals more work might have been done on developing a male contraceptive, or, at least, more care might have been taken in distributing a drug meant for females only.

We will never know, but the record of men's medical treatment of women isn't reassuring. You need only recall the hysterectomy vogue and the countless number of women who had their insides cut out for reasons that many doctors think they were too tenuous to justify major surgery.

In the case of oral contraceptives the same treatment of women as cheap and expendable appears to have been at work. In his book, The Pill (Fawcett, 1969, 75 cents), Morton Mintz writes, "For years it has been an open secret that in some family-planning clinics the pill is handed out with little if any regard for the examinations, warnings, and follow-ups that are supposed to be rigidly observed."

●

Mintz is writing about birth-control clinics for low-income people but it would seem that middle-income women often get scarcely better treatment. While there are many conscientious doctors who prescribe the pill with great caution and insist on repeated visits by their patients, this is by no means always the case.

In addition, an increasing number of school clinics are now prescribing it, probably under circumstances not much better than those obtained in the low-income clinic.

On balance it appears hundreds of thousands of women have been given this drug without being told what's not yet known about it and often with assurances of safety which the evidence does not justify.

This has driven Dr. Herbert Ratner, the medical writer, into writing, that, ". . . Plato distinguishes between the physician who takes care of slaves, and the one who takes care of freemen. Whereas the slave doctor prescribed 'as if he had exact knowledge' and gave orders 'like a tyrant,' the doctor of freemen went 'into the nature of the disorder,' entered 'into discourse with the patient and his friends,' and would not 'prescribe for him until he had first convinced him.'

"The reader can determine for himself whether women, as patients, are treated as slaves or free persons."

●

The Senate committee looking into the pill didn't try to link it up with the status of women, even though this element plays as large a part in the controversy as the pill itself. Six members of the Women's Liberation Front interrupted the hearings to complain that there were no women witnesses or senators taking part in the inquiry.

"Nothing," said one of them, "makes the oppression of women more obvious than the hearing today."

It may have made it obvious to her, but it doesn't to most men. In strictly masculine company, it's still almost impossible to bring up the topic of the treatment of women without being regarded as a kook. Men, especially in executive positions, will not even admit it is an issue, which isn't surprising in a sex that continues to believe it has a right to direct the most intimate functions of the other sex's body.

Would we have the problem of the pill or all this fuss and claptrap over abortions if it were men who got pregnant?

Husband, Wife Ranked the Same In Army Reserve Company

By JUDI FREEMAN

When the phone rings and the caller asks for Master Warrant Officer McDougall, two people are likely to come, running. Mike and Phyllis.

Confused? Well; so is the caller, usually. And sometimes the McDougalls are, too, but they laugh about it and take the inevitable ribbing good-naturedly.

Mike McDougall retired as a master warrant officer of 155 Company, Royal Canadian Army Service Corps last summer. His wife, Phyllis, is still in the unit as training co-ordinator and recruiting officer. She is one of two women master warrant officers in Canada.

The company is a militia unit and members attend evening, week-end and summer training sessions.

Phyl admitted that their active involvement in 155 Company sometimes leads to family squabbles on army procedure, but that's part of the game.

The McDougalls have been in the armed forces since the Second World War. Mike had a brief break from regular forces to the reserves.

Phyl's break was a little longer. She joined the Canadian Women Army Corps in Victoria in March 1955.

Her service history begins January, 1943 in Britain when she joined the Auxiliary Territorial Service attached to the Royal Corps of Signals.

"It was top secret work as a special wireless operator," she said. "Even today I can't say a word about it because in certain places in the world this type of job is still done."

Phyl was waiting to be posted to Africa when the war ended.

On June 17, 1945 Phyl married her Canadian soldier. Two weeks later, Mike was posted back to Canada, still wearing his wedding suit—a plaster cast from shoulder to toe, the result of wounds received in Belguim.

"I spent my first Canadian winter in Flin Flon, Man.," she recalled with a wry grimace.

The McDougalls came to Victoria in 1948. Seven years later Phyl joined the CWAC in 5 Harbor Defense Battery, Royal Canadian Army. Qualifying as a searchlight operator at Camp Mary Hill, she transferred to the Service Corps when the battery's role changed to field artillery.

The 155 Company RCASC is a land transfer company trained to get food, fuel, ammunition and troops wherever and whenever they are needed. It trains drivers to a professional standard.

Phyl then qualified as a clerk and driver mechanic in courses during the evening and at summer camp at Wainwright, Alta.

"I was petrified the first time I had to lie underneath a truck to work on it," said Phyl.

She trained women within 155 Company until being made training co-ordinator for the entire company.

Men from the age of 16 and women from the age of 18 are instructed in general military procedure and driver training.

The women take care of the administrative tasks and do drive, although they are not in the "front lines."

Right now the company is looking for male recruits to keep its establishment strength up to 74. At the moment there are approximately 20 women in the company.

Senate Hears Inconclusive Evidence on Pill

The latest alarms about birth control pills stem from U.S. Senate sub-committee hearings in Washington this week, during which experts testified as to the Pill's appalling consequences or relative safety.

The Senate's leading advocate of tighter drug controls says "women should be told more about the hazards of birth control pills, but he doubts they are competent enough to sort through the detailed information available.

"There is a question about how much technical information should be given a patient and how competent women are to receive it," said Democrat Senator Gaylord Nelson, committee chairman.

LIST OF DANGERS

Women are, however, considered competent enough to read that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration lists 39 side effects, complications and warning signs that range from dizziness, backaches and loss of hair to fatal blood clotting.

Senator Nelson admits that a woman "probably ought to know about five or six things, such as leg pains, to look out for so she can know to see her doctor."

But he feels it probably would be difficult for a woman to "carry around a list in her head."

Women are also considered strong enough for the warning that they "are in a grim race with laboratory animals to determine the safety of the pill."

Birth control specialist Dr. Roy Hertz told the committee that "The ultimate outcome of this race between dogs, monkeys and women can be anticipated by informed observers only with great apprehension and concern."

SUMMERSKILL: "Damn the Pill"

Hertz was speaking after a Johns Hopkins gynecologist, Dr. Hugh J. Davis, warned that birth control pills may encourage cancer growth.

"Estrogens," Hertz said, "are to breast cancer what fertilizer is to a wheat crop."

Latest word comes from a British doctor testifying before the committee.

"I have the unhappy task to inform you of an unpublished British report . . . that there is a significant increase in coronary disease in young women using oral contraceptives," Dr. Victor Wynn, professor at the University of London, said.

Dr. William M. Spellacy of the University of Miami warned that the Pill causes liver disturbances in some women.

There are differences of opinion about the Pill in Britain, too.

SAFER THAN DRIVING

Another story quotes experts in London claiming one contraceptive pill is "less of a health hazard than smoking a cigarette, driving a car, taking a swim in the local pool or becoming pregnant.

"But is the Pill safe enough?

"So far there is no conclusive answer."

Two people however, have taken a firm stand.

"Damn the Pill," said Baroness Summerskill in London.

Her recent appeal to have the Pill entirely banned in Britain was turned down by government spokesmen in the House of Lords.

In Washington, Dr. Robert W. Kistner of Harvard Medical School, is strongly pro-Pill.

"The Pill is safe," Kistner declared.

"It is safer than pregnancy but not as safe as continence . . . one cigarette is three times as dangerous to life as one Pill."

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Telegraph Played Important Role

By BOB BOWMAN

Although the last spike of the CPR transcontinental was driven in December 1885 at Craigellachie, B.C., the coast to coast telegraph service was completed on January 24 of the same year. It was just in time to play a part in defeating the Northwest Rebellion that began in March when Metis and North West Mounted Police clashed at Duck Lake.

The telegraph service, which Metis and Indians regarded with hostility and called "talking wires," was primitive, and hand-operated in tiny stations. It not only followed the railway line, but there were branches to Edmonton, Battleford, Prince Albert, and other settlements. This proved useful not only for military and police instructions, but for providing settlers with news through newspapers which included the Calgary Herald, Edmonton Bulletin, Prince Albert Times and Saskatchewan Herald which were all in the danger area.

Of course the big problem was to keep the telegraph service in operation because it was easy for the Metis and Indians to cut the wires. This happened between Calgary and Edmonton at a time when Edmonton was in danger of being attacked. The Indians camped outside Edmonton were beating their war drums and there were only 30 men capable of defending the tiny community. They had muzzle-loading guns and had to make their own ammunition and gunpowder.

It was essential to get help from Calgary and James Mowat volunteered to try to get there on horseback. Nearly everybody knows the story of Paul Revere's ride when the American Revolutionary War began, but it was a pleasure canter compared with Mowat's desperate dash to Calgary. First he had to get out of Edmonton without being seen by the Indians. Then he galloped the 200 miles in bitterly cold weather stopping only to get fresh horses along the way. It took him 36 hours to get to Calgary where arrangements were made to send troops to Edmonton immediately.

Mowat rested and then rode back to Edmonton with copies of the Calgary Herald containing the latest news of the development of the rebellion. When the Indians heard that troops were on their way, they stopped beating their war drums and went back to farming.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: My husband is mad and sad because he's responsible for breaking Peony's leg. She broke it when he let her jump down from his lap. She's done this lots of times before and I always warned him but he wouldn't listen to me. Now he's got to pay the bill and she's got to suffer for weeks with that cast on. He says it was just a freak accident and I say he was stupid to let her jump at all. Don't you agree? Oh yes, did I mention, no, I didn't, that Peony is a toy Chihuahua.—R.T.

DEAR R. T.: It's common practice for most lap dog lovers, to allow their lap-sitters the option of jumping from lap to floor all by themselves. And such a leap is usually made successfully. Even so, the mighty midget must land properly to avoid injury. The risk involved is easier to appreciate on a comparative basis: The toy jumping from a person's lap absorbs as much sock as a happy hound dog hurtling down to the floor from a height of six feet.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Manuel is, and always has been, quite a nervous, high-strung cat. And he has always been fussy about his food even though we picked him out of an alley as a kitten. One problem I have always had is getting enough greens into him. He has always been a very poor variety eater. But I've finally found one vegetable he's crazy about. Catnip. He eats it shredded fresh or dried and ground up when I mix it in his food. And he is crazy about his food, too. But he gets so high after such a meal I wonder if it interferes with his digestion? Does it do anything to his personality? Could it make his nervousness worse?—Z. A.

DEAR Z. A.: Catnip is the favorite vegetable of many cats, but most don't actually have it served as a regular portion of their meal. Manuel might not benefit from this portion of his diet, epecially if it is continued over a long period of time. It would then have some detrimental effect on many of his processes, digestive and otherwise, especially so when he is normally a bit highstrung. I'd slack off a bit on this particular bit of greenery for him. If you can't find an acceptable substitute for him, don't worry.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Bobo has always been a dog who loves rich foods. His figure shows it. But he loves fat things and his skin has always been the healthier for it. Our new cat, Turnbolt, has also taken to eating a lot of Bobo's fatty foods. Will this upset a cat's digestion or cause it other harm?

DEAR N. M.: The dog's normal fat requirements may run from 10 to 15 per cent of his ration without digestive disturbance. Continued heavy caloric consumption can contribute to catty corpulence, of course.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it possible for a dog to have pains in the chest such as angina pectoris in the human? Does this condition occur in the dog?—A. J.

DEAR A. J.: Yes, angina pectoris can occur in the dog. However, it is comparatively rare in the canine.

Trespasser Fined $400

Richard J. Marynavitch, 22, of 450 Kingston, who said he was taking a shortcut through private property when he was apprehended by a resident was fined $400 in court Friday for trespassing at night.

Judge William Ostler asked Marynavitch if he was lost Jan. 22 about 10:50 p.m. when he was observed by a Pilot Street resident peering in the window of a neighboring home.

"I wasn't lost," Marynavitch replied, adding he was merely cutting across the property on his way home.

Crown Prosecutor Peter Birkett pointed out there was no thoroughfare on the property and there was a fence.

The resident watched the accused for about 20 minutes in the neighboring yard before he held him and called the police.

The accused had previous convictions for possession of stolen property and breaking and entering and theft.

* * *

Georgia E. Doig, 18, of no fixed address, was given a one-year suspended sentence for shoplifting.

The accused, who pleaded guilty, told Ostler she had been hitch-hiking around the province and was originally from Prince George.

Ostler said, in passing sentence, those "who wander around the country in an itinerant fashion" were bound to get into trouble.

The accused had been apprehended Jan. 13 at Safeway's 2635 Quadra, when she took a carton of cigarettes without paying for them.

Ostler commended the offer of the accused's aunt, a local resident, who was willing to provide a home and attempt to get her enrolled in the Institute of Adult Studies.

"Your aunt is a very good women but you must remember she is making sacrifices."

Ostler said he had read the pre-sentence report with "extreme dismay."

"You are a confirmed drug addict and you seemed to have tried everything in the book," he added.

Ostler said he was sentencing Bock to New Haven, a Borstal type of institution, to see if he could turn his back on the drug culture when he finished his sentence.

Bock had pleaded guilty to possession of coins and a camera Jan. 8 when he appeared in court.

"Alcohol and motorbikes are about all you are interested in," Ostler told Lawrence E. Weeks, 19, of CAF base, before giving him a one-year suspended sentence for breaking and entering and theft.

LOCAL ENTRY Ralph Higgins' Gabrielle II will be making her first attempt at the Victoria-Maui classic, considered the toughest ocean race in the Pacific area. (Hector Alexander photo.)

VICTORIA-MAUI CLASSIC

Bumper Fleet to Make Run

By PAT DUFOUR

A bumper fleet of 50 yachts is expected to compete in this year 2,310-mile Victoria-Maui race, due to start at Brotchie Ledge July 1.

Twenty-two skippers have already filed entries.

Raced every other year, the classic drew three entires in the initial 1966 contest. This increased to 14 in 1968.

●

Among them are Henry Kotkins of Seattle, whose 73-foot yawl Diamond Head came first over the line in 1969, beating out his old rival Mary Bower, also entered in the coming race. Mary Bower is owned by John Long of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

●

Bruce Hedrick of Portland, Ore., has entered Six Pack, the Columbia 50 sloop which was first boat to round the outward mark in last year's Swiftsure, finishing third over-all.

Ralph Higgins of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be making his first bid in Gabrielle II, the 24-year-old 48 foot sloop which won the 585-mile Cobb Seamount Race last July.

Higgins has raced two Swiftsures in Gabrielle II, being the first Victoria boat home in 1969 and ending 22nd over-all.

A night school teacher and four of his students will form part of Gabrielle II's crew. Robert Darby, who teaches the subject, will be navigator, having a back-up team of the skipper, his brother Glen, Dave Gair and Peter Watts.

●

The skipper's wife, Connie, and Mrs. Christine Stillborn, whose husband, Laverne, will round out the crew roster, will take on galley chores.

Two other Victoria boats are also early entries. They are Dave Lawson's Cubara and Wally Meakes' Potlatch II, both coming back for their second try.

Meakes will have to hustle to make the race. His 36-foot sloop was dismasted and received deck damage when a boathouse toppled on her in a December storm.

Winner of the 1968 race, Royal Vancouver Yacht Club's Porpoise III, owned by Bill Killam, will have plenty of challengers for top place this year. Among them will be a 73-foot ketch, owned by Killam's brother, Lol, and also designed by Victoria marine architect Peter Hadfield.

●

Other 1968 entries who will be trying it for the second time around are Californian author Leonard Webberley, whose Cun-a-Mara narrowly missed shells fired from an American destroyer in the last race; Don Fryer's African Star, Dave Nielsen's Moonglow III, and Bill Johnson's Rainbird.

Royal Van officials, who are co-operating with the Lahaina club on organization, report that entries are split evenly between Canadian and American yachts.

●

More than 50 names of would-be crew members have been filed on the crew pool roster. Several of these are interested in signing on to help bring boats back to the mainland.

Wenman Wants Japan Office

Robert Wenman (SC—Delta) proposed that B.C. open a permanent B.C. House in Japan during the coming year with "a view toward expansion into other Asian markets in the near future."

He said he was disappointed to hear that the government planned to expand B.C. offices in Britain and the U.S. before permanent Japanese offices were established.

Wenman also criticized the federal government for high interest rates.

9 IN MEMORIAM

COOK — In loving memory of our son Al Cook, who passed away Jan. 25, 1968.

We often sit and think of him
when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak,
when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.

—From Mum and Dad.

BCTF Slammed For 'Politics'

A Social Credit backbencher suggested Friday that the government give serious consideration to prohibiting the collection of teachers' dues by school districts.

Burt Campbell (SC—Revelstoke-Slocan) contended that the B.C. Teachers' Federation had engaged in a "partisan, political campaign" during the last election and that a "political levy was made on teachers who are supporters of all parties in a futile attempt to defeat this government."

Campbell, in seconding the motion for a adoption of the throne speech. said that his suggestion was only to "protect the individual teacher who does not want to be compelled to engage in partisan politics."

The MLA also criticized our educational system," and suggested that perhaps the time had come to institute bargaining on a province-wide basis.

SCHOOLS ACT

Campbell said that possibly the government could even bring the matter of teachers' salaries under its direct influence by amending the Public Schools Act.

The MLA charged that the arbitration awards made last December to teachers were inflationary, and that salary increases that "ranged from 6.5 to 9.2 per cent are certainly most difficult to accept when teachers have been getting yearly increases right along."

Teachers' salaries make up 68 per cent of the operating budgets of school districts, Campbell said, and since the government contributes the most money to the cost of education, it must play a greater role in determining wages.

The freshman MLA turned his guns on the federal government for frustrating "the commendable and worthy attempts of our provincial government in the field of home ownership."

WHITE PAPER

He particularly criticized the proposed capital gains tax on homes as outlined in the federal government's White Paper on Taxation. The tax would be "nothing more than a tax on inflation," Campbell said, referring to inflationary trends across Canada.

Campbell called upon the government to oppose the CPR's expected application to the Canadian Transportation Commission to abandon its transcontinental passenger service. He said the abandonment would be a matter of major importance to Revelstoke.

The MLA also suggested that the government lower the age of legal majority from 21 to 19 years, and the age a person considered a juvenile from 17 to 15.

'Lesson Learned' —Petroleum Body

The Canadian Petroleum Association expressed for the first time its philosophy on environmental pollution, when its B.C. manager Friday commented on the throne speech promise of more controls.

"Our industry has always been conscious of the conflict over pollution," said B. G. McGillivray, "and has learned some hard lessons, so we feel we know what our responsibilities are."

BROAD BASE

He noted that the association represents all segments of the petroleum industry from land and offshore exploration to development and pipeline companies, but not refining and marketing sectors.

The statement, contained in six paragraphs, endorsed efforts to prevent pollution and conserve Canada's environmental resources, and attributed responsibility to individuals, business, industry and all government levels.

It supported joint government, industry and university studies of environmental conservation on social, economic and scientific levels to attain sound standards and regulations.

Efforts of provincial and federal governments to continually reappraise soil, air and water conservation standards were supported, and the association believed that while the federal government should provide guidelines and minimum standards, specific rules should be established by provincial governments.

The association pledged its cooperation to government in seeking standards and welcomed opportunities to review and comment on proposed legislation.

McGillivray said the industry generally—though fortunately not exposed to incidents in Canada—had learned "probably the hardest lessons of all" in offshore exploration.

"Our technical people can draw on this experience," McGillivray said. "We aren't superhuman. We can't foresee acts of God, like ship explosions. But our safety factors are very high."

He said in his own experience, while serving on the prairies, he had been aware of problems involving crop damage, livestock injury, salt water disposal and soil pollution in the search for and production of oil and natural gas.

Such problems had been faced by the industry for many years, he said.

Scouts Set Slide Show

The Fifth Garry Oak Bay Scout Troop will stage a program of slides Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in Newcombe Auditorium, Provincial Museum.

The slides, accompanied by a commentary, are on three trips.

The first is one taken across Russia on the Trans-Siberian railroad. The second depicts the Chilcoot trail to the Klondike and the last shows a scouting trip on Forbidden Plateau.

Funds raised from the showing will be used to buy camping equipment.

Clarke Scores 4 As Leeds Wins

LONDON (CP) — Allan Clarke, England's £150,000 ($390,000) star, scored four goals today for Leeds United and ended, by a 6-0 count, the dream of Sutton, a little non-league soccer club, in the fourth round of the English Football Association Cup competition.

Clarke got two goals for major league-champion Leeds in the first half and another two in the second half against a Sutton team make up of amateurs and part-time professionals.

Sutton's advance into the last of 32 of the English Cup had added to the fascination of the Cup competition that will provide its 89th final at London's Wembley Stadium later this year. It is the one competition on the English calendar in which amateur and part-time pro teams can tackle the giants—if they get through the early rounds.

American Woman Lived Biafra War ... And Ended Loser

In 1965 a bluue-eyed blonde from the Bronx named Elaine Polesir married Al Okonkwo—and thereby began an adventure that would lead to the horrors of the Biafran war. Her husband became a high official of the Biafran government, which only a few days ago surrendered to Nigeria. Now back in New York, having lost 50 pounds during her ordeal, she has told her story exclusively to NANA.

By ELAINE OKONKWO

NEW YORK — For me, Biafra was "my war." I lived and suffered and wept through the agonies of this benighted nation which has breathed its last.

An American (from the Bronx, N.Y.), I married a Biafran doctor, Al Okonkwo, in 1965. We had met in a New York hospital where we both were working. Al took me home with him, and when Biafra declared its independence in 1967 he became a high official in the Biafran government, at one time military administrator for the midwest province, and later a cabinet minister.

My husband, a brave man, stayed behind, while I and my two Biafran babies have just escaped from hell. Nancy is four and Daniel is two. Al did not tell me, when we parted, where he would go should the government surrender.

It was on Thursday, Jan. 8, that I realized the end was coming. The village we lived in was removed from the fighting most of the war, but now an extraordinary tension descended on us all.

We knew we had to get out right away, to reach my husband who was then working at Orlu, a major town near Owerri. We were tired and hungry, and piled into our Land Rover with as many provisions as we could scrape up.

I hadn't known that the situation in Orlu was even worse. The Nigerians were advancing from that direction, too. The road was alive with refugees and ox-carts and automobiles, each fighting to move a few yards ahead.

★ ★ ★

We reached Orlu and my husband at nightfall and spent the night there. The Nigerians' were just about to arrive. Owerri already had been evacuated. "Go back home," Al implored us. "It's the safest place in Biafra."

I put a few things in a suitcase and we left in the Land Rover that evening (Friday, Jan. 9). But I was afraid, hungry and penniless, and without even enough gas to get back to the village.

So we went to the headquarters of Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief organization, where we were put up overnight. The director said he could put me on a plane at Uli airport that would take me and my children out of Biafra. He said it was my duty — to my children — to do this; that to stay on would be to consign them to God know's what fate.

As an American in the care of Caritas I qualified as a foreigner to be evacuated. But for my two children — the red tape we had to cut, seemed almost insurmountable; indeed there was a painful absurdity to it all since the country was expiring by the hour.

Despite it all, we got the necessary permits, and succeeded in reaching my husband. We said our goodbyes, and Al refused to go with us to the airport — lest it seem to the onlookers that he was abandoning his country. He had formulated his own plans.

The road to the airport was crawling with infants and old people whose limbs were like chicken bones picked clean. Along the sides of the road were others who were dead or about to die.

You could feel the sickness in the air. Not just the disease brought on by protein deficiency, which turns the kinky African hair red, but tuberculosis, hepatitis, malaria.

The most unforgettable thing about the crowd was its silence. Nobody spoke, nobody cried, not even the children. Nigerian planes flew overhead at low altitudes and nobody raised their heads or looked for shelter.

★ ★ ★

All at once, a strange rumor came whispering back through the crowd, that the Chinese had arrived to save Biafra.

"The yellow men have come to help us," went the absurd rumor. I do not even know if they meant the Communist Chinese or the Nationalist Chinese — and as quickly as the rumor began it evaporated and was not heard again.

We reached Uli airport at 6 p.m. Saturday, and waited for dark to fall, because our planes could land only at night time.

Nigerian fighters had dropped 28 bombs on the airstrip that afternoon, and Nigerian troops were within gunshot.

Finally, around 8:30, our plane landed. By now there was nobody left at the airport except the passengers, so we did all the unloading of the food and medicine (the last relief packages to get in before the surrender).

Less than two hours later we were on the island of Sao Tome, where Caritas gave us beds and food. We were still on Sao Tome on Monday when Biafra succumbed. By the following Friday we were in New York.

Had I done the right thing, fleeing Biafra for America? My children need a father. And, in the U.S., blacks with a white mother will not have an easy time.

I don't believe that you can live in Biafra, as I have lived, and come back as if nothing had happened. In Biafra during the war we lived in darkness, famine, insects in our beds, floods in our cellars, and always the tortured look in children's eyes, children who never knew the world could be anything but pain.

Now, I am back in a world of refrigerators, subways, automobiles, and a sickening array of food.

The trouble is, I no longer know who I am. At one time I was a girl from the Bronx who was brought up believing in the great ideals — the right to live in peace, the right to pursue happiness.

Pool Budget Restoration Unanimous

Victoria city council Friday unanimously agreed to restore $52,000 to the equatic facility budget in order to provide "a first-class pool."

But even though the vote was unanimous (Ald. Clyde Savage abstained from voting and was thus recorded as casting an affirmative vote) it didn't come until after pool critics had their last whirl of comdennation.

In the past Ald. Savage has criticized the pool concept because it was too costly and because it was to be built in Central Park.

Friday he switched his criticial trend claiming that the entire project from the start had been "a snow job!" He said council had been "railroaded."

Savage was present at most of the discussions on the pool throughout the past year.

HOODWINKED

Ald. Tom Christie joined with Savage in claiming that city council "was somewhat hoodwinked." It was the first time he had made the charge although a consistent critic of the pool cost and site.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, one of the committee members who wrestled with the pool problem for 18 months, took embrage at only one critic — Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Haddock told council that he thought "the last mayor (Hugh Stephen) and last year's council had been most discourteous in making the decision to approve the pool."

And he added that "the whole thing was developed in haste."

The charge proved too much for a dour Ramsay who rose to demand an explanation and to growl that the remark was "out of line."

Savage suggested that part of Central Park be converted to a parking area while city owned property on Caledonia be reserved for park space to compensate for lost park area.

He said he felt 1,000 feet was too far to walk on a winter night after a swim.

France, Britain Restore Co-operation

LONDON (AP) — The foreign ministers of Britain and France agreed Friday to restore co-operation between their two countries in as many fields as possible, including foreign affairs.

It was clear the two ministers had managed to set the basis for a British-French reconciliation after a six-year freeze.

—In the context of British-French relations Schumann held up the projected English Channel tunnel as a symbol of the sort of co-operation the two countries ought to develop.

—They agreed their two governments should keep in the closest possible touch and harmony on as many issues as possible in the realm not only of British-French collaboration, but also of world collaboration.

—Each outlined his country's standpoint toward the Arab-Israeli conflict. And each described his government's relations with Libya's radical regime, particularly in the context of arms sales. Schumann gave Stewart details, which the informants did not disclose, of French arms contracts with the Libyans, while Stewart returned the compliment by detailing the course of current British negotiations with the Libyans.

—On Nigeria, it seemed the foreign ministers tacitly set aside their old differences over the abortive Biafran bid for independence. Instead, they sought to agree on how best to meet Nigeria's future needs.

POLLUTION TAX URGED

Social Credit MLA Burt Campbell Friday suggested that the five per cent sales tax be increased to six per cent to raise money for pollution control.

Campbell made the proposal while seconding the adoption of the throne speech in the legislature.

The MLA said the fight against pollution was the responsibility of every citizen and said that the tax would involve all citizens in pollution control. People should be prepared "to put their money where their mouth is", he said.

Campbell stated that the one per cent surcharge, based on the amount of the social service tax raised in the last fiscal year, would raise $35 million per year. He suggested further that the surcharge be tried for a period of perhaps two or three years.

The MLA said he felt that the tax would not be hardship on those at the lower end of the income scale because they spend their money on non-taxable items, but that industry would pay the bulk of the funds collected.

Egyptian Planes Hit Canal Targets

Times News Services

Egyptian bombers pounded Israeli positions in the southern sector of the Suez canal today, following up on a deep aerial penetration Friday into the Israeli-occupied Sinai desert.

Israeli jets raided an area south of the Dead Sea today and in ground action killed 10 Arab commandos in a clash on Jordan's border.

A Cairo spokesman said today's bombing attack near the Suez set two Israeli positions ablaze, did heavy damage and returned safely to base.

Friday's strike by the Egyptians was their deepest into the Sinai Desert since the 1967 Middle East war. It was acknowledged by the Israelis who claimed military installations and encampments had escaped damage.

The Egyptian attacks followed Israeli raids including the capture of an island at the entrance to the Suez Gulf and another air attack on army installations on the outskirts of Cairo.

Israeli troops captured Shadwan Island Thursday. The Isrealis said they had killed 70 Egyptians and took another 62 prisoners.

The Israelis withdrew from the island Friday after holding it for 32 hours. They took out Egyptian hardware and a British-built radar station—the second radar system to fall into their hands in less than a month.

Cairo said the Israelis failed to remain on the island "due to stiff resistance on the land and massive air strikes." But Isreali officers said they "didn't come to stay." They said they had fulfiled their mission and were under no pressure to leave.

INQUEST MONDAY

An inquest into the death of John Douglas Hampton will start Monday even if test results from the Vancouver police laboratory have not arrived, Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Friday.

The results were expected Friday, the coroner said, but he had been informed the tests on blood and body substance samples taken from the 18-year-old Saanich high school student are still being completed.

TRUCK EXPLODES, 17 ISRAELIS DIE

ELATH (AP) — An Israeli army truck laden with explosives blew up at the dock of this Red Sea port today after disembarking from an Israeli transport ship. Early reports said 17 persons were killed and 34 injured.

An Israeli military spokesman said there was no immediate evidence that the blast was caused by Arab saboteurs.

The blast in Elath's naval port shook and rattled windows throughout the city of 13,000 people.

One resident who rushed to the military port after hearing the explosions said:

"We saw a huge black mushroom of smoke. There were dozens of bodies strewn over a hundred yards. It was the most horrifying thing I have ever seen."

One unconfirmed account said the truck was being unloaded from a transport ship which had brought back military equipment captured on Egypt's Red Sea island of Shadwan, held by the Israelis for 32 hours this week.

Strike Closes Vancouver Schools: B.C. Mediation Body Intervenes

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial mediation commission Friday stepped into the labor dispute that has closed Vancouver schools by calling a meeting of those involved in the wage dispute.

About 75,000 students were sent home Friday morning when 206 members of the International Union of Operating Engineers walked off the job. Classroooms are expected to remain closed Monday.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson was asked Friday if he considers the schools an essential service of the kind in which binding arbitration may be used to force an end to the dispute.

"I regard the schools as an essential service. If it (the strike) stops the operation of the schools or interferes unduly with the health requirements of the schools, the answer is yes," he said.

Asked if the school strike situation qualifies for the use of the arbitration procedures contained in the Mediation Commission Act, he said:

"There is provision for a recommendation along these lines by the minister of labor at the appropriate time.

"You don't have to read too far between the lines to understand the significance of that."

Mr. Peterson said he had not received any reports on the situation from either the striking union or the Vancouver school board.

Shortly after making the statement that the school board and the union received notices from the mediation commission that it will hold a preliminary inquiry Monday "to ascertain matters in dispute."

Nigeria Pulls Unruly Troops

Atrocities Spark Action

Times News Services

LAGOS — Nigerian troops accused of running amok, looting and raping in the former rebel Biafra enclave have been withdrawn from the area.

Federal headquarters has replaced them with the 1st Marine Division, considered Nigeria's most highly disciplined unit and the core of the army before the civil war broke out in 1967.

Military police were reported taking stern measures against troops caught molesting civilians or looting.

Reports said about 30 soldiers were rounded by in Owerri this week and led away with their hands bound, under armed guard, to military cells. In another case an officer drew his pistol and aimed at a looting soldier but the man fled into the bush.

FINAL HOURS

The troops withdrawn, the 3rd Marine Division, bore the brunt of the battle in the final hours of the civil war. Observers attribute their lack of discipline and misconduct to the fact most of them were recruited and hurriedly trained under pressure of the Biafra uprising.

Meanwhile, Nigerian authori-

BOMB SUSPECTED IN UBC BLAST

VANCOUVER (CP) — An explosion Friday night in an empty seminar room at the University of British Columbia blew out windows and damaged furniture under which a bomb was apparently placed.

Police said there were no injuries and no fire as a result of the blast.

Two weeks ago an explosion caused about $500 damage to the main entrance to the UBC mathematics building.

Senate Moves to Cut Marijuana Penalties

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Senate moved today toward passage of a bill sharply reducing penalties for using or selling drugs ranging from marijuana to heroin.

A vote was expected Monday and leaders of both parties predicted passage. The bill then would face house consideration.

The measure, backed by the Nixon administration, also is designed to crack down on crime syndicate drug trafficking through stiff sentences for pushers found in court to be "professional criminals."

They would face at least five years in prison for the first offense and 10 years for the second, with no probation, suspension or parole allowed.

Penalties also would be stiffened for adults convicted of selling drugs to children.

The bill would eliminate mandatory jail sentences for most other drug offenses, including sale of heroin and other hard narcotics. It would make possession of marijuana, heroin or other drugs — the charge imposed on users — a misdemeanor rather than a felony.

The judge could even cancel a first conviction so, for example, a youth picked up at a "pot party" would carry no criminal record.

Victoria Rink Advances Again

Victoria's Tony Gutoski defeated Harry Spottiswood of Port Alberni 8-5 and Don McRae of Nanaimo edged Vancouver's Mert Ballard 8-6 to advance to tonight's 'A' final in the Pacific Coast senior men's curling championships at Victoria Curling Club.

Paris Teen-Ager Fifth Immolation

PARIS (UPI) — A 17-year-old girl set fire to herself today and leaped to her death from a fourth floor window of a private school in a fashionable section of west Paris. It was the fifth immolation suicide in France this week.

No motive was immediately reported for the fiery death today of the high school age girl indentified as Caroline Shutz. One of the other suicides involved a youth who said he was protesting the Nigerian civil war.

A witness said he saw the girl after she jumped from the window of the school near the River Seine on the right bank.

"I heard a scream from the school and when I went outside I saw a flaming body on the sidewalk," he said.

EX-VICTORIAN SUSPENDED BY BOARD

Beard Sparks Quebec School Mini-Crisis

By PAUL WILLIAMSON
(Special to the Times)

QUEBEC — A Quebec school board has suspended a former Victorian from his position as a teacher because he refuses to remove his beard.

The suspension of 23-year-old Bruce Wallace is the latest in a series of crises ro rock the school board of the Quebec City suburb of Charlesbourg.

And the row has moved Quebec education minister Jean-Guy Cardinal to label the school board's action "farfelu" — which roughly translates as "hare-brained."

The suspension of Wallace, son of the principal of Oak Bay Senior Secondary School, has caused widespread public comment and has been given considerable attention by the French language press and television.

His father John Wallace, working at Oak Bay High this morning, said his son telephoned to inform him of the suspension, but that he had no further information on the incident.

Wallace, who attended Willows School and Oak Bay High, was a first-class student and student leader at the University of Victoria. He graduated in 1968 and taught English and chemistry in an interior B.C. high school last year.

On Jan. 14, he was suspended from his Quebec position as a Grade 11 English teacher. School board officials report he was fired for "insubordination" because he refuses to comply with a regulation that teachers must be shaven.

While teaching in B.C., Wallace wore a beard. He went to Quebec with his wife and infant son last August. In early September, at the time of his interview with the director of personnel for the Charlesbourg school board, he still had his beard.

WALLACE
... wants beard

It was only after he had signed his contract and school had opened that he was told he would have to shave.

The personnel director, Sylvio Langlois, told Wallace the rule was "ridiculous" but that it had to be obeyed. He suggested, however, that it could be changed.

For what, according to Wallace, were mainly financial reasons, he decided to abide by the regulation and he shaved, but told Langlois that he was considering growing his beard again over the Christmas holidays.

"It was only when I let the last couple of inches grow, joining the sideburns to make a beard, that school board officials reacted," Wallace said.

He grew the beard while visiting British Columbia for the Christmas holidays.

On his return, school did not open unutil Jan. 14 because of "administrative difficulties." One day before the classes resumed, Wallace was told that he would have to shave.

He refused.

In an interview, Wallace said "my personal reason for growing it back was that I feel better in a beard and I look better with a beard, and therefore I am more relaxed in the classroom."

When he realized the school board was in fact going to demand that he shave, Wallace decided on a one-day strike.

Delta-Kaiser Deal Slammed

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Friday termed "an absolute scandal" a deal between Delta municipality and Kaiser Resources Ltd. to supply Delta water to Roberts Bank superport.

He said the provincial government would use its powers to set aside the deal, a "subterfuge" in which the National Harbors Board played a role in "undercutting" B.C. laws.

Campbell said the water deal "purports to be the basis of Delta's right to collect taxes on the port facility" but added that the municipality could collect taxes only under the authority of the provincial Municipal Act "which prohibits under-the-table deals with any industrial enterprise."

Campbell, in a letter to the municipality, said it was unbelievable that Ottawa is claiming that land created off Roberts Bank for the port facility lies outside Delta and outside the province of B.C.

Earlier this month Campbell issued a statement backing up a provincial cabinet order which had extended Delta boundaries to include all the port lands.

Ottawa claims that a Supreme Court of Canada ruling on offshore rights means water lots are federal territory.

Campbell made his remarks outsdie the legislature.

Robert Wenman (SC—Delta) said in the house that he was "shocked" to hear that Ottawa was trying to create "another province" in the middle of B.C. by maintaining the superport land was outside of the province.

Papers Not 'Critical For Criticism Sake'

OTTAWA (CP) — The two daily newspapers in Halifax reserve the right to criticize any public policy but refrain from publishing editorial criticism just be be criticalk the special Senate committee on mass media was told Friday.

The committee quizzed representatives of the newspapers at length about why the morning Chronicle-Herald and the evening Mail-Star had not commented editorially about certain public issues.

The two newspapers are owned by halifax Herald Ltd., which is held 65-per-cent by publisher Graham W. Dennis, 25 per cent by his sister and 10 per cent by L. F. Daley, company solicitor and vice-president, the committee was told.

Lawyer Yves Fortier, for the committee, said research has shown that the Haligax dailies had never taken an editorial stand on the provincial government's handling of the heavy water plant in Glace Bay or pope Paul's pronouncement against birth control. Nor had the newspapers directly endorsed a political candidate.

Mr. Daley said the newspapers regarded the pope's pronouncement as a matter of personal conscience, rather than a subject for editorial comment.

Mr. Fortier said a great many Canadian newspapers had commented. The Halifax newspapers had commented during the Canadian flag debate and was not that also a matter of personal conscience?

Mr. Daley said religious matters touch people more deeply. People can be readily offended if their personal religious feelings are attacked.

On the subject of not endorsing political candidates, Mr. Dennis said Nova Scotia is a small province. The newspapers take pains to make sure political parties get equal nes coverage.

Discussing the heaby water plant, a Nova Scotia Crown corporation in which technical troubles have delayed production, Mr. Dennis said it is a thorny problem in which the credit of Nova Scotia could be jeopardized.

The newspapers try not to aggravate the situation, but they keep after the subject by publishing background, explanatory articles.

Mr. Fortier observed that in his wirtten submission, Mr. Dennis had said his nespapers try to mold public opinion through eidtorials. He said there was apparently no attempt to mold opinion about the heavy water project.

Mr. Dennis said the position of the newspapers is to await events and see whether a solution to the heavy-water project can be worked out.

Mr. Daley said the nespapers were not willing to acknowledge that the heavy water projeact is a failure. Also, he said, extremely technical issues are involved.

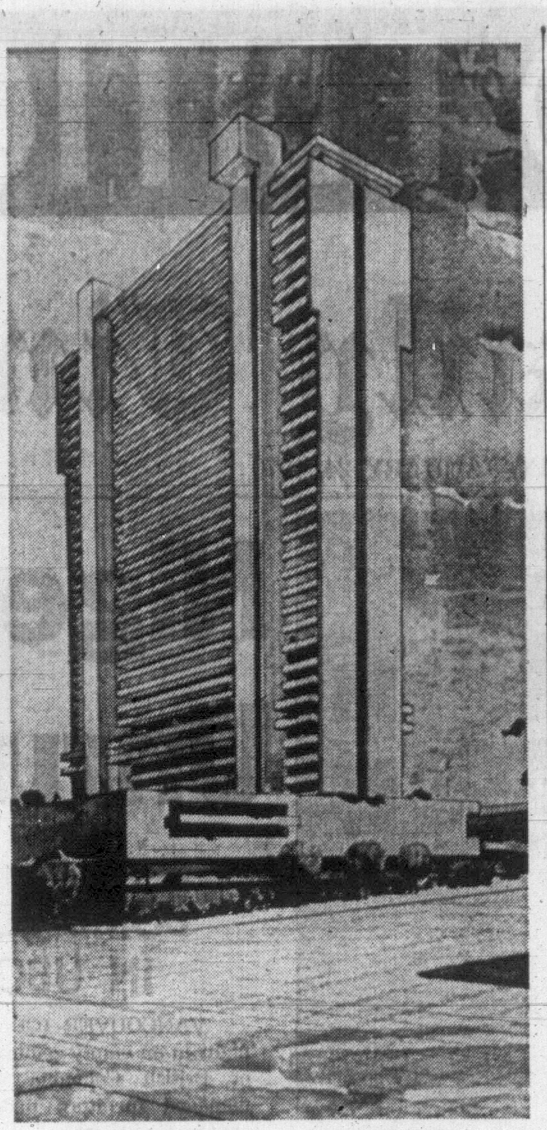
Until a decision is made about the project's future, he did not think the newspapers could contribute anything. They did not wish to engage in criticism for criticism's sake.

If the newspapers had failed at all, Mr. Daley added, it was in not criticizing the fact that it is taking a long time for a decision about he plant's future to be reached.

Earlier, Senator Keith Davey L-Ontario, committee chairman, asked whether it is fair to say tha Halifax Herald Ltd. has a monopoly in the print media in Halifax. Mr. Dennis said it is not a monopoly. Mr. Daley agreed the newspapers are overwhelmingly dominant.

U.S. Gives Most

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The UN Children's Fund announced Friday its appeal for emergency contributions to Nigerian relief has raised nearly $2,500,000, 80 per cent from the United States.



Artist's Concept of Proposed High-Rise

Council Approves High-Rise Plans

The tower will be 330 feet high, about five time the height of The Bay building.

Although by far the tallest building on the Victoria skyline the $8.5 million project would not, council members were assured, spoil the skyline.

It was an assurance that did little to allay the fears of Ald. Hugh Ramsay who said the height was "out of all proportion to what the city of Victoria should have."

Ald. Peter Pollen said the plans for the building had received a great deal of study before being approved and added the building was "esthetically outstanding." He also noted that the area of the city in which the project was panned badly needed some "vitality."

Copp told the Times later construction will start this summer and take about 18 months. Contemplated name for the building is the Sir James Douglas Tower.

The plans call for a two-storey shopping mall with parking above it. The tower will have 209 motel units, topped by 195 apartments, 35 of them classified as luxury units. One floor of the tower will be devoted to recreation facilities, convention and banquet rooms.

The rooftop restaurant and cocktail bar will be reached by an express elevator housed in an outside glass-walled shaft.

The 34-year-old Copp is a native of Vancouver who has operated in Victoria for the past seven years and owns and operates apartment buildings here.

He said Friday he believes the new project will be the tallest building in western Canada and the fourth tallest in the country.

LONGER RUNWAYS SOUGHT

The transport department will be asked by Victoria Chamber of Commerce to revise its plan for extension of Patricia Bay airport runways.

The project planned for last year and deferred to 1970 was to increase runway length to 7,000 feet and install improved landing aids.

Chamber directors Friday approved a motion by transportation chairman Newell Morrison to ask that the extension provide for 8,000 feet, so as to accommodate fully loaded jet aircraft.

They also asked that regular jet traffic be instituted here by 1973 or 1974.

Dealing with the road approach to the airport, Morrison said he was unable to obtain information on whether the "atrocious" connection with Patricia Bay Highway will be corrected. It is "a horrible stretch of road," he said.

Sexual Assault Confirmed

Pathologist Dr. F. L. Sturrock said Evangeline, whose eighth birthday would have been on Jan. 15, died from asphyxiation either from the pond water she was found lying face-down in or from her own gastric contents.

He said later he expects further medical tests to indicate which of the two caused death.

He said there was "very definite evidence" Evangeline had been sexually assaulted.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

When doctors and researchers a hundred years ago wanted to learn something about the effect of weather on people, they could feel pretty secure that the local population was stable. It is different now, with the migration of so many people from region to region and even continent to continent. Biometeorologists have been able to learn, however, what happens to big people and little people when the weather gets cold.

Heavy people who are broad framed, like the Scandinavians and the larger Americans and Russians, feel warmer than do smaller people during a cold snap. But smaller people who are lightweight recover more quickly from exposure to cold.

Smaller people also have another advantage over the six-footers: they show less harmful effects from the stress of exposure to cold than big men.

. . . BEARD

"I wanted to draw to the attention of the teachers that the school board had the legal power to dictate this kind of personal regulation to a professional group."

But when the union stepped in, he changed tactics.

"When I was assured of the support of the union, I was willing to take the chance of having my contract revoked and having the union push it as a test case."

Currently, school board officials have recommended that Wallace's contract be revoked. The board must act on the recommendation within the next 10 days.

The Association of Quebec Teachers, the accredited union for Charlesbourg district, has given notice that it will appeal if the contract is revoked.

Union president Etienne Tremblay said the ruling against beards is "ridiculous, anti-democratic and contrary to the rights of man."

RIGHTS ISSUE

"Many priests wear beards, popes have worn them, and I myself wear a moustache," said the Minister.

"The school board should think about more important things," he concluded.

The Charlesbourg school board has already been the object of criticism this year. In September, schools opened two weeks late because at the last minute the time table for the entire district had to be revamped.

In October, all 6,000 students in the district were expelled for three days in a row over dress regulations. In January, schools opened three to 10 days late because of a mix-up in school bus timetables.

And the Wallace affair has brought the school district into the headlines once again.

The French language press, more opinionated in their news coverage than most English papers, have ridiculed the school board's action against Wallace.

FRONT PAGE

In a front page story, L'Action, one of Quebec City's dailies, proclaimed "this case, caused by the untimely zeal of certain people in authority, constitutes an escalation in the struggle to banish long hair and mini-skirts, etc."

The largest daily, Le Soleil, in a story on Jean-Guy Cardinal's comments, ends the story with "as for Mr. Wallace, he must have laughed in his beard on hearing Mr. Cardinal's comments."

School board official Langlois admits that "if the Minister of Education says that our rule against beards is completely hare-brained, that is certain to weigh heavy in the balance."

But appeals take time, and Wallace is looking for another job.

PETITIONS

The suspension of Wallace because he wears a beard has sparked widespread reaction in Quebec City.

An official of St. Patrick's High School in suburban St. Foy told Wallace that a committee has been set up to revamp the school's regulations which to this point have outlawed beards.

Wallace was told the action was taken as a direct result of newspaper coverage of his suspension.

Teachers at two other Quebec schools have signed petitions asking the school board to reinstate the suspended teacher.

The petitions claim "the amount that a teacher shaves each day in no way affects his professional qualifications or competence."

The newspaper L'Action reported that two other Quebec area school districts have rulings against beards, but that they "would not be enforced."

Quebec's other French daily, Le Soleil, quotes Elphege Morasse, the principal of the school where Wallace teaches, as saying both he and personnel director Sylvio Langlois "admit that the rule is ridiculous."

Vietnam Documentary Film 'Classic in Journalism'

By STEVE HUME

The crunch and clatter of troops marching mingles with the roar of the crowd, and the standard-bearers hold their staffs proudly.

It is a scene that calls to mind other eagles and another army, marching into Europe and the Mediterranean under Roman generals 2,000 years ago.

SHINES LIKE JEWEL

Emile de Antonio's documentary about the Vietnamese people's fight for freedom and self-determination is a multi-faceted jewel in a year of good movies.

With brilliant editing and exhaustive research, de Antonio has created a classic in film journalism.

He covers Vietnam from the French rule, through the corrupt Diem regime to the peak of U.S. involvement.

But he does not succumb to the temptation to moralize or condemn. He leaves that to his subjects in judiciously-collected film clips of speeches, press conferences and interviews from the last 10 years.

There are politicians, generals, statesmen, former civil servants and even a ranking member of the Central Intelligence Agency.

SELF CONDEMNATION

And they condemn themselves, in their own words, more convincingly than any movie director ever could with the artifice of his art form.

In the Year of the Pig solemnly records the lies, admitted mistakes and miscalculations, the bureaucratic bungling, the rationalizations and desperate justifications of a U.S. government tangled up in the trappings of an obsolete imperialism.

Oregon senator Wayne Morse catches the government telling blatant lies about Vietnam situations. An admiral of the joint chiefs of staff at the Pentagon is caught both lying and displaying shocking ignorance of the naval situation of North Vietnam by an adept CBS reporter.

POLITICIANS INDICTED

It all adds up, by the ethics and morals that have traditionally been American, to a massive indictment of the politicians who allow the Vietnam conflict to continue.

It is here that de Antonio's film transcends the genre of documentary, unconsciously taking on the characteristics of a Greek tragedy by Aeschylus.

There is the same cool, detached observation of the ordered and bureaucratic spread of evil, and the tragic consequences for a great nation that cannot come to terms with the reality of that evil.

FULL CIRCLE

And this is the tragedy of the United States: A nation that was born in a bloody fight for freedom with an imperial power has come full circle, has become the opposite of its hard-won birthright.

He sees a nation being dehumanized by the sophistication of its technology and the proliferation of its military hardware.

U.S. generals make racist statements about "Orientals," a colonel in the field talks in the same breath of the religious reverence of his men and the fact that they are "a bloody good bunch of killers."

Yet the film is not all one-sided. There is a sequence which gives an evocative historical perspective on Ho Chi Minh, intercut with clips of an interview with Yale professor Paul Mus who tells of Ho's wisdom and insight into Confucious.

There is an interview with a French journalist who visited North Vietnam during U.S. air raids, who describes the depth to which the people's determination has grown.

He describes the peasants, armed in the fields with rifles, and shooting back at supersonic U.S. warplanes.

This, says the journalist, is a sign of the humanization of the Vietnamese people's struggle.

The government proved to the people it did not wish to oppress them by giving them all guns. They, in turn, could overthrow the government in a day. This is the trust of the government and the people.

. . . NIGERIA

ties are believed today to have received first-hand information, verifying recent reports by foreign newsmen about disorganization, starvation and mistreatment of Ibo women since the war's end.

Reliable sources say Chief Anthony Enahoro, commissioner of labor and information, has received the report from a government aide who accompanied a group of 80 journalists into the area this week.

IBOS FLEE

His report apparently emphasized four main problems, commandeering of Ibo girls and women, lack of organization in relief efforts, absence of vehicles to transport refugees and Ibos fleeing into the bush.

Observers say the main difficulty at present is a lack of communications between the war-ravaged areas and Nigerian administrative centres.

The vanquished Ibo tribesmen have admitted there has been no genocide on the part of federal troops as they had been warned to expect by Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu, the former Biafran leader now in exile in the Ivory Coast.

In London, a British mission appointed by Prime Minister Harold Wilson deplored today what it called the indiscipline and misconduct of Nigerian troops "flushed with victory" in the former war zone.

Huntsmen Assemble Prior to Unleashing of Hounds

'NEW HUMANE STYLE'

Foxless Hunt Chases Foxy Scent

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Victoria's first fox hunt in 50 years got off the mark today with everything but the fox.

Hounds and riders pursued, not a live animal, but a horse-drawn sack containing the droppings of a fox.

And even the droppings had to be imported from the mainland.

Some 45 men and women, ages ranging from 14 to 61, pursued their quarry, behind a pack of six hounds, over a circuitous 12-mile route over meadow and woodland to a finishing point near Prospect Lake Community Hall.

The rider trailing the fox-scented sack was given a 10-minute start from Echo Valley Farm. A while later, the fierce barking of the hounds, when they picked up the scent, was the signal for the start of the chase, emphasized by a shrill blast on the huntsmaster's horn.

•

Participating were riders from Victoria, Comox, Duncan, Courtenay and members of the Fraser Valley Hunt Club from Vancouver, Cloverdale and Langley.

Leading the chase were three red-coated veterans — hunt-masters Col. John Reynolds, Vancouver, and Dr. John Gilray, Cloverdale, and Edward Simpson, president of the Fraser Valley Hunt Club.

The hounds and many of the horses were shipped in vans aboard the first ferry from Vancouver.

Before the start of the hunt, riders and horses paraded around the paddock at Echo Valley Farm. Some of the horses caught the excitement of the occasion and reared dangerously, but no one was thrown.

"We hope to make this an annual event on Vancouver Island," said Col. Reynolds from Vancouver. "We hold two or three hunts every year on the mainland and they are extremely popular."

Among Victoria riders were Miss Bo Cubbage, Miss Akison Robb, Mrs. Dandi Cherry, Miss Dina Gubson, Clifford Clark and Glen Dunlop.

Trim and elegant astride her horse Vodka was Mrs. Pamela Arthur from Langley, who used to chase live foxes over the rolling English meadows.

"They still do," she said, "but I think the animal lovers would be a great deal happier if English huntsmen chased only the scent of the fox."

•

Mrs. Rosemary Woodward from Vancouver described the hunt as an exhilarating exercise and said she hoped the hunt would be repeated next year.

"It's tremendous fun," said 17-year-old Melanie White, one of the youngest riders. "You get the first thrill when the horses line up for the start."

Veteran huntsman Edward Sumpson said fox hunting on Vancouver Island is very different from England because of the rocky terrain.

"In a sense it's more adventurous," he said.

The red coats of the leaders made a bold splash of color against the grey sullen skies and the riders were in high spirits.

A hunt breakfast was to be held after the chase at Prospect Lake Community Hall. Some of today's huntsmen will ride in a second hunt at Duncan Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

Gung Hay Fat Choy To You Too, Friend

Gung Hay Fat Choy, which means wishing you lots of prosperity, will be frequently heard in Victoria's Chinatown Feb. 6—the Chinese New Year.

According to the Chinese calendar, it will be 4668 or the Year of the Dog.

FINE TRAITS

Bessie Tang, an authority on Chinese customs, said according to the Chinese almanac people born in the year of the dog have all the fine traits of human nature.

"Dog-year people inspire other people's confidence and know how to keep private secrets absolutely private," she said. "Other people hold them in high regard and consider them fine persons."

Dog-year people also are champions of justice, she said.

"They don't like small talk," she added, "and generally make good leaders."

Most Victoria Chinese-Canadians will celebrate the entry of the New Year with a special dinner at midnight.

On this occasion "Jie," a special dish not tainted with meat, is served to all members of the family.

Simple greeting cards will also be exchanged along with red-packaged coins.

Both the packages and cards will probably bear the words Gung Hay Fat Choy.

According to an ancient custom, all debts are paid up before New Year's Day.

VISIT PATIENTS

Members of the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club will also visit patients at the Chinese Hospital on Fisgard. They will distribute pastries and other treats.

New Year's celebrations many years ago were celebrated with more gusto.

Air was filled with the constant din of hundreds of exploding firecrackers to frighten away the evil spirits.

But all this has changed—the old order changeth, so to speak.

Ask The Times

Q. At one time there was an area in Esquimalt known as the Transfer. Where was it, and how did it get the name? M.J.R.

A. The area known as the Transfer was located on a high pinnacle of ground immediately north of Lampson Street School. It became known as the Transfer during the days that the Willow Transfer used it as a turning point for their transfer system, using the spot to water and fodder their horses.

School Girls Slack Off Now the Rules Are Lax

By DON VIPOND

One big reason girls wanted to wear slacks to school was because the rules were against it.

Dress regulations at many Greater Victoria high schools have been relaxed lately and what has happened won't surprise parents.

Wearing slacks, from jeans to pant suits, underwent an initial flurry of popularity. But that has faded and the majority of girls have returned to wearing skirts and dresses.

It proves once again how young people like to lean on the rules. When the rule disappears, so does the challenge it represented.

A sampling of four local high schools, two senior and two junior, shows three of them permit girls to wear slacks now. Fewer girls are doing so.

Mt. Douglas principal Jack Lowther said Thursday as many as 50 per cent of the girls wore slacks when it became apparent earlier in the school year they were no longer on the forbidden list.

But now girls in slacks are down to about one in 10, depending on how cold the weather.

MAXIS RARE

Peter Boldt, principal at Oak Bay junior, reports the same experience and adds there appears to be a fair amount of parental resistance to slacks.

He has had only two calls from parents on the subject and both were against permitting slacks.

At Victoria senior secondary, vice-principal Reg Reid confirms the trend and anticipates an even more marked swing from slacks as spring weather arrives.

He notes, too, the rarity of maxi outfits, maybe because it gets tiring holding a long skirt or coat up from muddy sidewalks and steps.

At S. J. Willis junior secondary there is a ban on slacks but principal Horace Dawson says there has been little pressure from either students or parents against it. The prohibition is relaxed in cold weather.

"If enough parents want their kids to dress any old way, they'll come and tell me," he says.

HELICOPTER TO BUILD FROM SKY

Building from a helicopter? This is the technique to be used by a local construction firm Sunday morning when the helicopter will lift a piece of equipment into a downtown building site.

Dominion Construction Co. Ltd. will use the helicopter to lift a 1000-pound fan into the Toronto-Dominion Bank building project at the corner of Douglas and Johnson in a 10-minute aerial operation.

The copter will start at about 9 a.m.

Nun Asks Children To Save Biafra

She issued an appeal Friday for children to set aside the first school day next week as a day of vigil to become more sensitive to the condition of Biafran children.

"I have deep conviction they can find solutions," Sister Margaret said, urging principals and teachers to cooperate with children in creating a day of prayer and information on Biafra.

* * *

She said she hopes that such a movement could become world-wide with children awakened to the Biafran suffering being able to exert pressure on parents and through them on governments to act quickly in the desperate situation.

Sister Margaret said she has been intensely concerned about the situation in Biafra since the fall of the secessionist territory two weeks ago.

She has already had experience with a children's vigil held at St. Ann's recently and feels that is is one approach to the Biafran problem that has not yet been tried.

SISTER MARGARET
. . . wants a day of vigil next week

She hopes that a successful "children's crusade" on Biafra would lead to long-term programs involving children in the lives of their fellows around the world.

Sister Margaret said she has "the blessing" of Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo in the effort.

She said schools could cooperate in the effort and hoped that the authorities would see a vigil in far broader and more humanitarian terms than simply a day away from arithmetic lessons.

Children haven't been given the chance to "come up with solutions" and they should be, she said. But the time to act was now because thousands of Biafran children could die in a few days' time, she said.

Children 'Victimized' By 'Deadbeat' Charge

Innocent children will suffer the detrimental effects of a provincial cabinet minister's public reference to "deadbeats" on the welfare rolls, Mrs. Susan Talbot of the Community Action group charged today.

There are 49,524 children of welfare recipients in British Columbia being held up to public ridicule through Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi's statements, she said.

"Statements like that are definitely going to downgrade those children who can watch television or read the newspapers," she said.

'AFRAID AGAIN'

She said there is "no way Gaglardi can rectify the damage he's already done unless he's willing to make a public apology."

"We've been working hard to build up these people's morale enough that they'll eventually be able to get by without social assistance.

"Then Gaglardi comes along and wrecks the constructive work we've done. These people are afraid again. They're afraid to ask for anything for fear they'll be cut from the welfare roll.

'LOT OF BLUNDERS'

"They must be made to feel that social assistance when they are in need is a right, not a charity."

The Community Action Group is composed of average, self-supporting families that work with needy families on social welfare.

The organization has recently been active criticizing Gaglardi for his statements.

"I think he makes a lot of blunders," Mrs. Talbot said, "I hope he is just being stupid, because if he's serious he's the last man we need for a social welfare minister."

Victoria Delays Health Pullout

Victoria city council Thursday gave the provincial government 30 days to find an answer to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health cost-sharing formula.

The decision to wait before pulling out to operate an independent health service was reached reluctantly.

Oak Bay Council had asked Victoria to delay the pullout for at least 30 days and Ald. Cecil Parrott asked that their appeal be heard.

* * *

"We wouldn't do ourselves any good if we just cut this off," Parrott said.

The rest of the council agreed to wait but left no doubt that at the end of that period they want a cost-sharing formula which will see all people in the district paying the same for health services.

At present, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria pay roughly $2 per head more for health services than residents of Saanich.

Arthur Mayse . . .

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S chief exponent of the Good Life has promised stiffer environmental controls, thereby paying lip service at least to a cause that a smart politician can no longer afford to ignore politically.

On the strength of Premier Bennett's conservation record, I will be hard to convince that he hasn't merely added a handy new public relations catchword to his store.

Certainly, Social Credit's environmental control score to date isn't one to encourage implicit belief in a change of attitude..

★

There is, for instance, the matter of strip-mining, welcomed into this province despite clear evidence that it destroys whatever landscape it intrudes upon.

There is also the recent decision by our Pollution Control Board, a limb of government, which will permit the dumping of 26,000 gallons of sewage daily into Trincomali Channel from a Saltspring subdivision.

These are recent examples of this government's approach to environmental control. There are others: in fact, the list is as long as it is dismal.

But if Premier Bennett really intends to back his assurance with action, the results should presently be visible.

Utah Construction and Mining, the American giant that plans to export copper and molybdenum ore to Japan from an open-pit operation, provides a test case. The company seeks to dump its destructive wastes into Rupert Inlet north along Vancouver Island at the rate of 9.3 million gallons a day.

Such planning is typical of American firms that have found exportable resources and a casual attitude toward pollution in our province.

A government honestly concerned with environmental control can give only one answer to such an application That is a firm 'No.'

If that reply is given, we can begin to hope that the leopard has indeed changed its spots.

If it isn't, the Throne Speech utterance can be discarded as a promotional gimmick not backed by intent.

TO FLORENDA JOY DICK, her heart-saving operation of almost a year ago is little more than a fading dream. However, the sunny little second-grader has been given a permanent reminder of those days when a city was pulling for her.

★

He never met his subject, but he saved her pictures as they appeared in the Times, and with them for his guide, he set to work.

Florenda, up at 6 a.m. next morning, chose it as the first of her presents to be opened.

★

"A gift to be cherished," says Mrs. Dick, "and we'd like the artist who sent it to know how grateful we all are. The picture hangs over the mantel in our living room, and it's already been admired by many relatives and friends."

I'M NEVER FULLY CONvinced that spring has come until the year's first skunk cabbage glows yellow among the lowland salmonberry tangles. But by the look of things, that day won't be too long arriving.

By way of a progress report, the early leafbuds of the bitter cherry have fattened, and in sheltered areas, you may see them spangled green among the greys and browns of the woods.

Our dog is finding new grass to nibble, and the signs point to an early daffodil season.

There's also more than a hint of pink in the tight-sheathed buds of the Japanese plum. Prune off a few scraggly twigs, set them indoors in water, and in a day or two, they bloom.

Of all spring scents from a tame garden, there's none to match the bitter-sweet fragrance of those fluffy blossoms.

If you're new to Victoria, a splendid sight waits you. About a month from now, give or take and depending on the ways of the weather, you'll see entire suburban blocks laced with a froth of flowering plum.

That's the start of a floral deluge which runs clear through till fall pops the chrysanthemums.
